

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

David Brackett, a Free Will Baptist minister of Brooks, Me., was born in Jackson, Me., February 1, 1837; received education in public schools; at the age of forty-two years was converted and at once began the work of an evangelist, as he himself says: "without being aware of the fact that I was preaching." He was successful in his labors; there were those among his converts who desired the ordinance of baptism and "I was rather forced against my will to enter the ministry," he continues. His first charge was at Swanville, Me. He describes how his labors were divided among several localities, thus—

"Our country churches unite in hiring a pastor; he preaches at one church in the morning, at another in the afternoon. I have had four pastorates at one time; would preach at two churches on alternate Sundays. I was with the Thorndike church for sixteen years, either half or all the time; with the church at Jackson for five years, part of every Sunday; with the church at Monroe for five years, part of every Sunday; also with churches at Montville, Dixmont and Knox. My last pastorate was at the Woolwich and Wiscasset churches * * *. I have attended more than a thousand funerals, officiated at about one hundred fifty marriages and administered the ordinance of baptism to 50 persons."

Mr. Brackett, because of poor health, has retired from the ministry, and is now living on his farm in Brooks, Me.

FAMILY NO. 22.

From Family No. 11. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, Samuel, Reuben, Edward A.

Edward Augustus Brackett, sculptor, horticulturist, pisciculturist, was born October 1, 1818, in Vassalboro, Maine; was educated in the common schools of that town and at the Friends' school in Providence, R. I. His father removed to Lynn, Mass., thence to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was apprenticed to several trades, none to his liking or tastes. He had tried his hand at modeling in clay, and his ambition was to become a sculptor. The West not offering enough encouragement he decided to go to Boston. His first years were the usual ones of a struggling artist, with the gradual rise to fame and success. The greater part of his work was in the line of post mortem busts, in which he excelled. Among those of note which he produced are of Washington Allston, the artist, who was his friend, Richard H. Dana, Sr., W. C. Bryant, Longfellow, Choate, Sumner, Garrison, Wendell Phillips, B. F. Butler, and John Brown. An account of his perilous journey to Virginia to see Brown, can be found in Sanborn's Life and Letters of John Brown. Of his ideal works a life-sized group in marble called the Shipwrecked Mother and Child, purchased by the Boston Athenæum and still in its possession, was his first. The Binding of Satan, another group, was not satisfactory to him and he soon destroyed it. Dickens' Little Nell, a statue full of classic beauty and grace, he still retains.

During his early life as an artist he composed considerable poetry, which under the patronage of Richard H. Dana, he published with the title of "Twilight Hours of an Artist;" a few of the poems which appeared in the volume were quite popular at the time of publication. Since, he has written many articles and poems for newspapers and magazines. A volume of poems entitled My House; Chips the Builder Threw Away, and a charming work in prose, The World We Live In, are recent works of his. Of late years his pen has been turned to the advocacy and defense of spiritualism.

Among his friends of his artist days he numbered T. B. Reed, the artist and poet, Benj. P. Shillaber (Mrs. Partington), Fanny Fern, and other contemporaneous artists and authors.

The proceeds from his art were never sufficient to meet his wants; his spare hours were required to obtain the necessities of an increasing family. He purchased land in Winchester, near Boston, and started a nursery. In this he was more or less successful; he added several varieties of strawberries and grapes, and was the first in his vicinity to successfully raise cucumbers under glass.

He had been experimenting in hatching trout and with the aid of Thomas Talbot, Emmons Hamlin and others made arrangements to experiment on a larger scale. The results were successful. Mr. Talbot was elected governor and appointed him (1871) commissioner of inland fisheries, a position he has held to the present date (1906) although in his eighty-eighth year. The scope of the commission was enlarged to include the shore fisheries and game. His strong originality is shown in his methods of hatching fish, in raising Mongolian pheasants, quail and grouse with which to stock the state. For this work he is notably well fitted as his only recreation through life is with his rod and gun; his enjoyment thereof is intensified by his deep love of a life near nature. His character is unique and slightly eccentric. By those who knew him as an artist his peculiarities were spoken of as the eccentricities of genius. Though kind, generous and genial he has an indomitable will which cannot be changed if once set. Brought up in strict Quaker faith, the habit of independent thought has made the dogmas of religion especially distasteful to him. The following story shows a line of reasoning of his. A good orthodox deacon passed his house daily in taking a cow to pasture, and many were the arguments they had on religion. One Sunday morning the deacon found him working in his garden and remonstrated. A few weeks later the deacon worked on Sunday to save his hay from spoiling. "Why, deacon" said Mr. Brackett, are you working on Sunday?" The deacon answered, "Yes. You see that thunder storm coming. I shall lose my hay if I do not." Mr. Brackett asked, "How much is your hay worth?" "Five dollars," answered the deacon. "Well, deacon," said Mr. Brackett, "I do not see much difference between us in our working on Sunday other than that I work on that day for my pleasure and you work for five dollars." In matters social and religious, and also in the matter of dress he is a law unto himself.

In 1862, he tendered his services to Governor Andrews and received a commission as battalion quartermaster of the First Massachusetts volunteer cavalry with rank of first lieutenant, a position he held until the office was abolished.

Married (1st) November 27, 1842, Amanda Folger, who died June 25, 1871, was daughter of Zacheus and wife, Betsey Ross; married (2nd) August 1, 1872, Elizabeth F. Bellville, a daughter of his first wife's sister. Home, in Winchester. Issue, all born in Winchester except Walter F.:

George Coleman Brackett, born October 26, 1830, in Unity, Maine; died April 18, 1903, in Fresno, California. His father removed in 1837, to Cincinnati, Ohio, and to Denmark, Iowa, in 1841, where he engaged in the nursery business. At Denmark, the son began the study of horticulture, and laid the foundation to his thorough practical knowledge of plants and animals. Received his education at Denmark academy and Amherst (Mass.) college. In 1856, he left Iowa for California by the overland route; at the time the Kansas excitement was at its height and upon reaching Lawrence, Kansas, he yielded to his impulse and took part in the struggle. Years passed before he saw California; his stay in Kansas proved a long one. From 1856 to 1859, he practiced law; in 1860, he turned his attention to what became his life's work—horticulture; his were the pioneer nurseries in the state. As early as 1860, he organized a county (Douglas) horticultural society and for twenty-six years was its secretary, its mainstay. In 1869, was organized the state horticultural society and he was chosen its secretary; was selected for the position as he was considered the one the best equipped of any of the members to fulfill its duties. He organized and established many societies in the eastern part of the state. In 1891, he was elected to the position of secretary of the American Pomological society and held the office for six years—as long as health would permit. He removed to California in hopes of regaining health, but the dread cancer had already begun its work, and after five years of patient suffering he passed away.

DIVISION NO. 11.

DEACON JAMES BRACKETT OF BERWICK AND
HIS DESCENDANTS.

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter VIII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, James.

James Brackett was born April 10, 1726; was baptized January 26, 1728, in Berwick, Me.; resided in the town for sixty-eight years; in 1794, with his youngest son, John Brackett, he removed to Vassalboro, Kennebec county, where he dwelt for sixteen years; in 1810, when said son John removed from Vassalboro to China, Me., he accompanied him; in China he dwelt for fourteen years, and died there January 3, 1825, having attained the ninety-eighth year of his age.

In Berwick, Deacon James was a farmer; from an early day in his life he attained social and political prominence. The first mention in the town records of his holding office, is that in the year 1763, he was chosen selectman; during the following few years the records disclose that he held two minor offices, for one term each; one was constable in 1766. For eight years following 1770, he was in office continuously. Appointed juryman in 1771, 1773 and 1774; elected constable in 1771, and re-elected each year until his services were needed in the conduct of an office which the crisis of the times required to be filled by a man of courage, and devotion to country. From the commencement of the struggle between the Colonies and Great Britain, this James Brackett cast his fortune with the former. Well did he know what were the horrors of war, for he had been a soldier in the last conflict with the French and Indians (1754-1763). In the seventies he was past the duty age in the field; but no man in Berwick performed a part better than did this Baptist deacon, in sustaining the cause of the Colonies. In 1772, a law was approved for the payment of the salaries of certain provincial dignitaries, among others the salaries of the judges of the supreme court, and of the attorney general, out of revenues (taxes on imported articles) which were considered by the people, as raised in an unconstitutional way. The citizens of several towns in Maine and Massachusetts manifested their opposition in different ways,—at Berwick by “24 of the leading citizens in calling a town meeting to take measures for the removal of the grievance. Those who were the first (thus) to show their loyalty to the people were * * *, James Brackett, * * *, Isaac Brackett, * * *, Samuel Brackett.”

In 1774, was passed the Boston port bill. By the act, the port of Boston was closed to commerce as though by blockade. It entailed great suffering on the inhabitants of the offending city. The people of the surrounding towns at once took steps to relieve the wants of the distressed, and sent overland to Boston droves of hogs, sheep and cattle. In Berwick, rebel Deacon James was one of six persons appointed in 1774, as a committee to receive the "donations of the inhabitants of Berwick and to transmit the same to the distressed people of Boston." He, of course, gave freely, added to the sheep the committee received, several from his own flock, and superintended the driving of the donations to their destination; hence, the tradition that James Brackett drove a flock of sheep to Boston which he gave to the famishing people.

The following year, 1775, he was chosen selectman, was chosen to the same office in 1776, again in 1777, and again in 1778. So long as danger threatened, he was one of the men chosen for the office whose duties involved the performance of the most efficient service in a civil way, for the support of the army and the provincial authorities. He was juryman in 1785, as the records read,—the last mention they contain as to his holding town office.

It has been stated that Deacon James served as a soldier during the last French and Indian war. He was thirty years old when the war commenced. It is not known in what company he served, but it is thought that the evidence we have shows that he took part in the war; at that period, men of military age on the frontier did not shirk duty. The writer was told the following anecdote by one in whom he has implicit confidence:

"When a soldier in the French and Indian war, Deacon James Brackett was detailed for a time as teamster. While he was with the wagon train a party of Indians maneuvered so as to successfully attack that part of the train where he was, and his chance of escape was by running. With his goad-stick in his hand he ran at the top of his speed pursued by an Indian, who had his tomahawk ready for use and was watching for an opportunity to throw or strike with deadly effect; so intent was he on his purpose, that when quite abreast of Deacon James he did not see in his course a fallen tree, which with a spring the Deacon cleared, and he tripped and fell over; before he recovered to act, Deacon James brained him where he lay, with the goad-stick."

The gun which Deacon James carried during the war was preserved for many years; as long as he lived he had it with him in Berwick, in Vassalboro, and in China. Upon his death the gun became the property of his grandson, Allen Brackett; ultimately the place where it was kept was in a barrel in a shed on the house. About the year 1850, Allen's sons utilized the old relic for the purposes of a cannon, in celebrating the Fourth of July of that year, and thoroughly demolished it.

When Deacon James and his wife went from Berwick to Vassalboro, in 1794, they made the journey on horseback, he in the saddle, and she seated behind him on a pillion. Such is the tradition with his descendants, through his son James, and the latter's daughter, Mary Beal Lamb.

He was quite well versed in the history of the family; well remembered his grandfather, Samuel Brackett; delighted, in his old age, to relate accounts of Indian wars, at about whose commencement said grandfather was born; told the accounts correctly, too (as the writer has learned), and had a good listener in his grandson, James Hervey Brackett, who passed them on down the line.

In stature he was below the average height of men, and was slim of figure; in advanced age was a little old man, and in the last years of his life was withered and feeble in the extreme; he had the use of his mental faculties to the last. For some years before his death, at meals he sat by himself at a small table, because of the shaking of his arms and hands. The table has been preserved.

It is thought that Deacon James, like his son John, was a member of the Baptist church; that he was deacon of a Baptist church in Berwick. In China he was spoken of as Deacon James Brackett.

He and his wife died in China; their graves are in the cemetery in China village, in a select part, and are faithfully tended and cared for by Theron and Annie Doe, their great-grandchildren; to them is due a debt of gratitude by the one thousand descendants of the deacon and his wife.

Married April 10, 1750, Margary Lord, baptized November 10, 1736, in Berwick, died July 7, 1816, in China, Me., daughter of Benjamin; he married January 10, 1709, Patience Nason, was son of Nathan; he is thought to have come from county of Kent, England, with Abraham Conley, whose daughter, Judith, was his first wife; married (2nd) Margary Everett; died about 1690, aged eighty-seven years; was a prominent man and held several civil offices. Patience Nason, born November 10, 1693, was daughter of Benjamin; he married Martha Kenney; was son of Richard Nason, the immigrant. Margary Everett was daughter of William, the immigrant, and wife, Margary —. Martha Kenney, perhaps, was daughter of Thomas Kenney, or Carney, Jr., and wife, Sarah Taylor. Issue:

Upon the expiration of said term, immediately re-enlisted to serve for one year under same company officers, Colonel Patterson's regiment. Re-enlisted 10 Dec., 1775, discharged 1 Jan., 1777. In his application for pension, he related that his first term of service was passed in the vicinity of Boston. That in Colonel Patterson's regiment:—

"I marched * * * by the way of New York and Albany to Montreal. Soon after our arrival at Montreal, in the year 1776, I was with many others captured by some British troops and Indians on our march to relieve a fort at the Cedars; was detained a prisoner of war among the Indians, eight days when I, with another, made my escape nearly naked. From Montreal I was directed to Ticonderoga. Finding no clothing there I obtained a furlough to return home to Berwick. I was taken with the smallpox on the way but reached home and as soon as I recovered I returned and joined my regiment at Ticonderoga. The regiment soon after being ordered southward, I marched with it to Albany, Esopus, through New Jersey and across the Delaware. On the night of the 25th of December I was with the regiment and the army under General Washington; recrossed the Delaware; was at the capture of the Hessian troops at Trenton. My term of service of one year expired soon after this event, and I was honorably discharged about the close of the year 1776, to the best of my recollection. I served in the capacity of sergeant. My discharge was in writing but is lost." Statement made under date of 7 May, 1818. In July, 1820, stated his age to be 64 years, and his wife's age 63. Was a Baptist minister; home, in Parsonsfield. FAMILY NO. 4.

John Brackett was born August 16, 1769; was baptized May 13, 1770, in Berwick, Me., removed to Vassalboro, Me., in 1794; about the year 1810, he purchased a farm bordering on China village, and on it passed the remainder of his days. Was a firm and sincere Christian, a devoted member of the Baptist church and prominent in its social circles; was one of the most forehanded and thrifty farmers of the town, and accumulated a moderately large estate for his day and locality. For over forty-five years he was a resident of China and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of quite all its people.

The writer's father related of him that he ordered some Indians out of his meadow, who were picking strawberries and tramping down the grass. An old squaw said to him with a deal of energy, "God gave this land to the Indians first." With bowed head he retraced his steps to his house, well contented to let the original inhabitants enjoy the first fruits of the land. He died in the eighty-sixth year of his age on May 5, 1855. When the remains of deceased, buried in a cemetery at China village, were removed to another cemetery, it was through their care that choice sites were selected, and the remains of said ancestors were properly re-interred.

Married Ortance McCracken, nee Jarrot, born in 1797, died in 1885, daughter of Nicholas and wife, Julia Beauvais. Her parents were born in Paris, and early in the last century settled in Illinois, at Cahokia, which place, at the time, gave promise of being a large city. Here Mr. Jarrot was engaged in trade with the Indians, and other enterprises; built a large brick house with walls three feet thick, designed to resist attacks by the Indians, and proved to be so well constructed as to resist the attacks of nature, it having withstood the destruction wrought by two earthquakes and four floods. At the time of her second marriage, Mrs. Brackett was the mother of five children, viz., Rachel, born in 1819, married Dr. N. J. Stark (two children, Charles C., born in 1844, and Nicholas, born in 1852); John, born in 1821; Nicholas, born February 23, 1822, a bachelor, died in 1895; Robert; Julia, born in 1826, died young. She was a woman of lovable traits, excellent social qualities, and well endowed intellectually; her conversational powers made her a favorite with her associates. Over her family she exercised an influence that endured for the lives of each member, and her remembrance will long be cherished by her descendants. FAMILY NO. 13.

From Family No. 4. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, James, John, Allen.

Allen Brackett was born August 15, 1798, in Vassalboro; resided from 1810 to 1859, in China, Me.; removed to Lincolnville, where he died April 11, 1876. In China, the greater portion of his business life, he was a blacksmith; a few years before 1859, he moved onto a farm in China. In Lincolnville, he was a man of leisure, and on his death left a goodly competence. Tomb in Lincolnville, Me.

The following is related of Allen Brackett: He had a partiality for Quakers. One of the sect sold him a horse; when asked if the horse would pull up hill, he answered, "Friend Brackett, it will please thee to see that beast pull up hill." The horse was balky, balked with his new owner at the first and every hill that he came to. Friend Brackett, on meeting the Quaker the next time after their trade, accosted him with, "You told me that horse was faithful and true and he has balked at every hill I have come to." Unabashed, the foxy fellow answered, "Friend Brackett, thou art hasty in saying that I told thee that the beast was faithful and true; thee asked if the beast would pull up hill, and I told thee that thou wouldst be pleased to see that beast pull up hill. Now, friend Brackett, verily, wouldst thou not be pleased to see that horse pull up hill?"

The writer has heard that Allen Brackett laughed heartily at the Quaker's deception; never heard that he changed his opinion of the sect, or that he haled this scaley specimen into court and made him disgorge his illgotten gain.

Married December 23, 1829, Octavia Allen, born February 19, 1809, in Vassalboro, died October 12, 1865, in Lincolnville, daughter of Charles Allen (brother of Lydia, who married John Brackett) and wife, Sally Mitchell. Issue:

Removed in 1864, to Sparta, Wis., near to which city he resided until his death, April 17, 1891. In Maine, he was a farmer; in Wisconsin, an innkeeper and retail grocer. By Maine laws he settled all legal questions, while living in Wisconsin, to his satisfaction, for, in Maine he ever continued to dwell in mind. Until he was seventeen years old his grandfather was living, who died in the ninety-ninth year of his age. The grandsire's stories of the Indian wars he well remembered; quite all of them the writer has recognized as related in local histories. Was of strong convictions and prejudices; he trusted as a friend and hated as a foe, though he was not revengeful; principles, not policies, were his governing motives, and for his principles he was ever willing to make sacrifices, ever steadfast was his adherence to them; to him they were unchanging; hence, in his old age, he had the religion and politics of his youth. Genial and jovial, he was ever ready for a laugh, to hear a good story and to relate one. For him life had many pleasures; what he possessed he could enjoy to the fullest, for envy had not a place in his heart.

From Family No. 12. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, James, James, James, George W.

George W. Brackett was born May 20, 1833, in Cohokia, Illinois; there he, as did his brothers and sisters, attended a private school; completed his law course in Cincinnati, Ohio, and practiced in Illinois and St. Louis. In 1849, accompanied by his uncle, Colonel Vital Jarrot, and his half brothers, Robert and Nicholas McCracken, he went overland to California, to seek a fortune in the gold fields. The brothers and uncle engaged in trade, erected stores at cross roads several miles apart. Accompanied by a Mr. Burns while travelling from one store to another he and his companion became snow-bound and shortly Mr. Burns sickened and died. At the time Mr. Brackett was in the eighteenth year of his age, and was thus left alone in the mountains for three months, with but a scant supply of provisions. To wile away the long lonesome hours he devoted his time to the study of Shakespeare's poems, a copy of which he was so fortunate as to have among his few effects. Every night and morning he fired his gun in hopes to direct assistance to him, but no answer came for many a long dreary day. At last there reached his ears the welcome sound of firing; repeatedly he discharged his gun to direct friend or foe, which ever it should prove to be, to his abode, and soon appeared an Indian, a messenger on snowshoes, the bearer of news from his uncle to act as guide for him to safety and plenty. In California he remained five years; returned to Illinois, and in the sixties was elected a member of the legislature. During the war was assistant provost marshal; also held several public positions by appointment and election. Was well read particularly on the history of Illinois and Missouri. Had a large circle of friends with whom he was popular because of his many good social qualities. He died March 19, 1898, in St. Louis; married November 22, 1859, Mrs. Margaret Busby Turley, born October 14, 1835, died August 21, 1903, daughter of James Busby and wife, Kathryn Kelley, of St. Louis. Issue:

From Family No. 16. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, James, Joseph, James, Henry H., George A.

George Augustus Brackett was born September 16, 1836, in Calais, Me.; raised in Orono, Me., where he resided until his removal, in April, 1857, to Minneapolis. In business he was engaged, from soon after his arrival in Minneapolis, in conducting meat markets, and eventually became connected with a corporation engaged in packing beef and pork located at New Brighton, near Minneapolis. During the war he was a contractor, supplied beef for the use of a regiment, and in this connection was with the army which operated against the Sioux Indians. While hunting with a companion he was pursued by the Indians, and his companion, a Lieutenant Freeman, was killed. He made his escape after dismounting, while the Indians endeavored to capture their horses. After walking two hundred twenty-five miles he rejoined the army. Seven days had passed, during which he had but little provision; the fifth day's journey brought him back to where his companion was killed; however, with his new bearings he was able to reach his friends and safety. Several years subsequently to the war he was a contractor in constructing railroads. Held city offices from an early date after his arrival in Minneapolis, and in 1873 was elected mayor; later, was park commissioner, in which capacity he rendered the city valuable service. Is an ardent advocate of the cause of temperance and has been closely identified with works of charity, having given large donations for the betterment of the unfortunate. He will be recalled to the memory of many by the mention of his connection with the Lord Gordon affair. A genuine Englishman — and a rogue — passed himself on Jay Gould as an English nobleman, under the title, Lord Gordon. Such a combination deceived Gould, who loaned it a half million; when he found that he had been imposed upon, Gould had the Englishman arrested. He obtained bail and fled to Manitoba. Mr. Brackett at the time was mayor of Minneapolis, was induced to send his chief of police to Manitoba to arrest Gordon, and finally went himself to assist his chief. They and others secured Gordon, and in turn were promptly arrested as kidnappers; afterwards were released. There was considerable bluster on the part of newspapers, and talk in certain centers of a rescue of Mr. Brackett by force. Matters quieted down and the affair was soon forgotten. Married August 19, 1858, Ann Maria Hoyt, born January 16, 1837, in Portland; died December 8, 1890. Issue:

From Chapter VIII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, Joshua.

Joshua Brackett, the youngest son of Samuel Brackett and wife, Elizabeth Emery, was born in Berwick, July 9, 1728. In the records of the First church is recorded his baptism under date of August 25, 1728. Berwick was his dwelling place until about 1780, when he removed to that part of the town of Shapleigh now in the town of Acton, York county, Me., where he resided the remainder of his long life. At the time of his removal to Shapleigh several of his sons were men grown. All his sons accompanied him and were residents of the town; his descendants there and in the neighboring towns are numerous. He was drafted to serve in the Continental army; his oldest son served as his substitute.

As early as 1758, while living in Berwick, he was elected to the office of surveyor of lands, which he continued to hold for several years. He was chosen selectman of the town of Shapleigh for the years 1785 to 1790, and 1792 to 1795, inclusive.

SEVENTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, Joshua, Joshua.

Joshua Brackett was born March 14, 1758, in Berwick; was baptized March 26, 1758. He served as a private from August to November, 1776, in Captain Samuel Leighton's company, Colonel Francis' regiment; also served four months, beginning in August, 1777, in Captain Samuel Grant's company, Colonel Joseph Storer's regiment. In his claim for pension, he saw fit to give an account of the operations in which his regiment participated; this he did in a clear and concise style. He stated that his father, Joshua, Sr., was drafted, in August, 1776, to serve in Captain Samuel Leighton's company, which organization was to join the army at Boston; that he offered to serve in his father's stead; to this his father refused to consent until he was informed that it was the intention of the son to enlist whether he served in lieu of his father or not; joined the company at Quampheagan landing, in Berwick; marched to Dorchester, where the company joined Colonel Francis' regiment; remained in Dorchester four months and then returned in Berwick. That in August, 1777, his father was again drafted for service; that,— 'I, Joshua Brackett, Jr., had the year before served a four months' campaign and had a comfortable time, so I offered to take the place of my father this time also, or to enlist with said Captain Grant. My father said if I would go I might a second time take his place. I accordingly had my name substituted on the roll by the captain in place of my father's. The company met at Quampheagan, in Berwick; from there we marched to Andover in Massachusetts, to draw arms; from thence we went to Bennington, Vermont, and arrived there the day after the battle at that place with the Tories and Hessians. I think General Stark commanded in that battle. We tarried at Bennington about twenty-four hours; from thence we marched to Stillwater and joined the Continental army in the regiment of Colonel Joseph Storer of Kennebunk. Our major was a Mr. Littlefield from the town of Wells * * * I was at the taking of General Burgoyne; in a part of the battle General Gates commanded our brigade. About 10 o'clock P.M., cannon were fired, the drums immediately beat to arms, and the battle soon commenced. In about two hours the British gave way but still kept firing on the retreat. There were scattering guns until dark. We laid on our arms all night. The next day there was not much fighting. The British soon after took up their march for Saratoga. We followed them to Saratoga, where, in the course of a fortnight the British sent in a flag of truce and soon after surrendered. From Saratoga we marched to Albany (N. Y.); and from there to Queman's Heights about twelve miles below Albany, and I, with twenty others, was sent about sixty miles to guard some beef at Weatherton, where I continued until discharged. The captain paid me sixty dollars at Berwick. All of said money run down in my hands and was good for nothing."

His claim for pension was allowed at eight dollars per month, and pension at that rate was paid him until his death. Although the oldest of the sons of Joshua Brackett, Sr., but two of his brothers survived him; he died November 22, 1851, in the ninety-fourth year of his age. Soon after the close of the War of the Revolution he removed from Berwick to Shapleigh, in which latter town he dwelt until he died.

He had good mental gifts and a fair education; was highly respected by all who knew him, and in his old age was a favorite with his fellow townsmen. Although he had no sons, there are descendants of his who bear his surname, a singularity that is explained in the account of the life of his well remembered daughter, Polly; was a farmer. He married September 10, 1784, Mary Tibbets, of Shapleigh. Issue:

EIGHTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 9.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Samuel, Samuel, Joshua, Joshua, Polly.

Polly Brackett was the oldest daughter of Joshua and was born in Acton in 1786; married Ezra Hutchins. Further knowledge of the life of this person would not have been made known to the reader, but for descendants of Joshua Brackett claiming descent from him in a male line. The information written by these descendants precluded the probability of a mistake, on their part, of being his descendants, and, therefore, inquiry was made of Mr. George Dana Brackett, of Acton, a gentleman, who, if he did not know a matter asked with reference to the Bracketts of Acton, would find it out for you. Mr. Brackett answered that he had talked with a Mr. Joshua Sanborn, a grandson of Joshua, and that Mr. Sanborn informed him that Joshua Brackett never had a son; "or," to use the language of Mr. George D. Brackett, "in other words that his mother never had a brother." It is submitted that this is pretty direct and positive testimony; still it was not satisfactory. Accordingly the letters of the alleged descendants were forwarded to Mr. Brackett. In about three months he unraveled the snarl. The marriage of Polly was an unhappy one; she and her husband Ezra, left Acton and shortly she returned with a son, James by name, who, she vowed, should never be known by the name of Hutchins. And she made good her vow; he was known by the name of James Brackett; probably he, himself, never knew the name of Hutchins. She with her son left Acton when he was quite young. "The people here don't remember him," wrote Mr. Brackett; "They only know what they have heard * * *. My idea is that this young man's great-grandfather was Ezra Hutchins; that his grandfather was the boy, James, whose right name was Hutchins, but was called Brackett. If I am not right I do not know how to get at the right of it." The young man referred to gave his line of descent from Joshua as follows: Ezra, James, Joshua H. (his father). The old residents knew nothing of an Ezra Brackett ever having lived in the town; so the statement that there was such person who was a son of Joshua, has little to rest upon. Hutchins was a tin peddler; he fell dead off his cart, from apoplexy. Polly, or properly Mary Brackett, was a person of force of character and determination, and in our day would be called strenuous. What she willed to do she did. The census of 1850 shows that she was living in Acton, a member of her father's family. She died before 1860. Issue:

DIVISION NO. 13.

CAPTAIN JOHN BRACKETT OF GREENLAND
AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FIFTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter No. VII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John.

Captain John Brackett was born about 1700, in Greenland, N. H.; during his entire life he lived in said town. Had landed interests in the adjoining town of Stratham; in a petition, dated August, 1746, which he signed, he is described as a freeholder of Stratham; during the following year, in such capacity, he signed a petition to the provincial assembly against the settlement of two ministers in the town, a matter that grew out of a division of the faithful as the result of a religious revival which was prevalent in many towns in New England, and from which sprang the West societies. The petitioners were of the faction that favored the old establishment in religious matters. Captain Brackett was engaged extensively in farming; also followed professional pursuits; his name appears in the probate records in the capacity of counsellor at law. Was active in military affairs, and during King George's war, from 1744 to 1748, he held the rank of captain; during a considerable part of the war his command was in active service. Records of the provincial assembly, under date of October 1, 1745, show that it was voted to pay persons in "Captain Brackett's troop" for their service in hauling ordnance stores at fort William and Mary. Also that on August 27, 1747, it was voted to pay one Thomas Parker, for house rent for the year 1746, and fifteen shillings for carrying the governor's orders to "Captain John Brackett" and to other captains.

The following is a report made by the captain which explains itself:—

"Greenland Sept. 30, 1745. By his Excellency, Mr. Benning Wentworth's order, I prest 20 men that belonged to my troop to onlode the storeship, but there was but 18 went, and they say they did three days work. John Brackett Capt."

The farm, which Captain Brackett inherited from his father, is still owned by his descendants; has been uninterruptedly owned by Bracketts, passing from father to son since it was acquired by Joshua Brackett prior to 1725. This farm Captain John gave to his son, Esquire George Brackett of local fame. To his son Benning, he gave the farm in Stratham, another farm in New Market, and a one-half interest in the sawmill at Wadleigh's falls. Another son was Dr. Joshua Brackett, one of the most eminent men in the province, who attained distinction both in his profession and as a patriot. Of his other four sons little is known; Daniel and Samuel died unmarried in the lifetime of their father, probably in infancy; Thomas died at the age of thirty-six, in the year 1753, possessed of an estate of several thousand dollars; John died unmarried, in 1800, lived with his brother George, on the homestead.

His son Benning was probably named for Governor Benning Wentworth, with whom Captain John Brackett was intimately associated. Captain Brackett, in his day, was one of the most prominent men in the province; his position as commander of a troop, which was intrusted with the occupation of one of the principal forts in the province during a time of war, attests his capacity and standing as a military man. By marriage he became connected with a family of respectability and influence. His wife was Eliza Pickering; to her he was married December 10, 1724. She was of Greenland, was daughter of Thomas, son of John, the immigrant, one of the signers with Anthony Brackett, of the deed of land for a glebe. Captain Brackett died January 20, 1759, as shown by his tombstone in the old Brackett burial ground on the estate of the late George Brackett, Esq. His widow, born in 1700, died February 7, 1762, married January 3, 1760, Rev. Mr. Joseph Adams, of Newington, N. H. For several years Rev. Mr. Adams had a charge in Stratham, was the orthodox minister of the town at the time of the religious excitement in 1746; among his supporters in the contest was Captain John Brackett. Issue:

3. Joshua, b. 9 May, 1732; entered Harvard college in 1748, and was graduated in 1752. Prepared for the ministry, but preached only a short time; was a Universalist. Studied medicine in Portsmouth, under Dr. Clement Jackson; practiced in Portsmouth, where he always resided. Appointed judge of the court of admiralty of the province of New Hampshire, and took the oath of office on 4 July, 1776, on which day his brother-in-law, General William Whipple, signed the Declaration of Independence as one of the delegates from the province. He held the office continuously until 1789, when the duties were assumed by a federal judge. He was elected 30 Oct., 1783, an honorary member of the Massachusetts Medical society, and in 1791, was conferred upon him the degree of doctor of medicine, by Harvard. Was a zealous promoter of the New Hampshire Medical society, incorporated 16 Feb., 1791, and is named in the act as a member; was elected first vice president, and elected president in 1793, which position he held until 1799; presented the society with a collection of medical works as the foundation of a library. For nearly 30 years before his decease he used his influence to have a professorship of natural history and botany established in Harvard, and donated $1,500 to the college for that purpose. He d. 17 July, 1802. Mar. 14 Apr., 1760, Hannah Whipple, b. 15 Feb., 1734, dau. of Captain William and wife, Mary Cutts, of Kittery. No issue.

The remains of Dr. Brackett and his wife are in the old North burying ground of Portsmouth, N. H. On a stone at the tomb is inscribed:

Beside the tomb of Dr. Brackett is the tomb of his wife, and on the stone is inscribed in addition to her name and dates of her birth and death, the following:—

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John, George.

George Brackett, born August 22, 1737, in Greenland, N. H., commonly known as Squire George, was one of the eccentric and public-spirited men whose memory is perpetuated in song and story. Of his sayings and doings the poet sings and the historian writes, in our day. It is a pleasurable task to bespeak the praise which has been his, from those who knew him well.

He inherited his father's farm, which fronted on the bay and adjoined, on the west, the farm of his uncle. Deacon James, the Peacemaker.

"We now will go on our way,
And ere we reach the Stratham Lane, toward the Bay,
And down the road, and now some time a public way,

Time presses to move along. Now here we find
The Thomas Brackett, son of George, the elder, mind.
This long low house, with lands around, was once a part Of the ancestral acres, dear unto his heart."

Both men, the squire and his uncle, were pillars of the Congregational church in Greenland. One of the many gifts of Squire George, for public purposes, he made in 1813, to the society for Promoting Christian Knowledge; it was $5,000, on the condition that the society was to pay annually $200 to the pastor of the Congregational church in Greenland.

Ingrafted upon his religion was a deal of superstition, as frequently was the case in his day, with most people of all classes; their unseen worlds were populated with a variety of good and bad spirits, of whom the bad were ever on the rampage. One dark night, in his one-horse shay, to which was hitched old "Star-of-the-Buttons," he was driving from his farm to the inn of Brackett Weeks, for a package. A neighbor, Thomas Greaves, was traveling on the road and carrying a lantern; hearing a vehicle coming behind him, Greaves stepped to the side of the road to let it pass, and closed the lantern so as not to frighten the horse; after the squire had driven past him Greaves stepped into the road and opened the lantern. Its light first made known the presence there of some being to the squire, who at once, in his mind, conjured up his particular prince of darkness, whose fiery breath and flashing eyes were emitting light to aid him on that dark night, solely for a sinister purpose. To be beguiled for a moment would result in the broiling of his soul forever in said prince's lake of brimstone. Hence, in no quaking voice he exclaimed, "Depart! Satan, depart!! retire! Satan, retire!! I have no need of thee!!"

However, "Star-of-the-Buttons" for a race was of the whip-and-spur order, was but a slow roadster at command of voice; he did not partake of his driver's fright, so jogged along as slowly as he would had his driver been talking to Mr. Greaves instead of to his devil,—and Mr. Greaves made known himself.

For portraying the contrast in this man's traits of mind, it is proper to next record of him that in making a gift of the sum of $2,000 for the founding of an academy in Greenland, he closed the instrument of conveyance with these words:—

"Though goodness without knowledge is weak and feeble, yet knowledge without goodness is dangerous; and both together form the noblest character and lay the sure foundation to useful mankind."

Surely satan and that which exists not unless there is a satan, will retire, depart forever from the minds of men who have goodness and knowledge inculcated in them. Perhaps the lantern's light on that dark night had its mission, A satan, knowledge and goodness have no common abiding place.

At an earlier date he had given $5,000 towards the founding of an academy in Hampton, N. H. There was expectation on the part of the people of Hampton who were interested in the academy, that on his death the squire would further endow the institution in "a sum so large" wrote a Hampton historian, "as to place it in a flourishing condition. Whatever his intentions, no provision was contained in the will for its benefit. The gift was to be made through a Mr. Abbott, its agent, who had conflicting interests at heart, even the establishment of a similar institution at Greenland, and to his persuasions Mr. Brackett yielded."

Thus is accounted for the origin of the Brackett academy in Greenland, an institution which ceased to exist long since. There was litigation between the trustees of the two academies; those of the one in Hampton brought action to convey in some unknown legal way to its coffers, the amount of the donation made by Mr. Brackett to found the academy in Greenland.

The Reverend Mr. Ephraim Abbott was a pedagogue of Greenland, had wielded the birch in that town for many years; was also in some capacity connected with the academy in Hampton; hence, his conflicting interests. The following is the story as told in rhyme by the Greenland poet:

"And Parson Abbott preached this day I went to church,
And though he preached the gospel, still, the birch
Was yet considered good and quite the proper thing
To make the lazy and unwilling birds to sing.
For then all held 'To spare the rod you spoiled the child.'"

In the day of this good parson, if the rod were spared, it was not because such course was thought the better one, but was spared from some motive of prudence, as the poverty of Dr. Syntax is an instance, thus told:—

"E'en birch, the pedant master's boast,
Was so increas'd in worth and cost,
That oft prudentially beguil'd
To save the rod he spare'd the child."

As Parson Ephraim lived in a land of birch, where tough withes could be had for the cutting, by their application:—

"* * * he left his mark. He's with the flock he fed;
Has gone to his reward, is living although dead.
He fostered learning; urged upon the town to build
The old academy. The teacher's chair he filled
With much success. * * *"

But wherefrom came the funds this classic hall to build?
 He found a man; secured a sum that nearly killed
 The son and heir of this George Brackett, rich in land
 And money
 These men 'the tees without a trust' were paid
 Two thousand dollars, and incorporation made.
 The name's in honor of George Brackett. By the way
 He lived where his great-grandson lives to-day.
 A lovely charming spot, up by the Greenland Bay."

One of the accounts of the manner in which the gift was made is that shortly before his death, and evidenced by a writing, Esquire George conveyed to Stephen Pickering and two others as trustees (the "tees without a trust"), land of the value of two thousand dollars, for the founding of an academy in Greenland, to be called Brackett academy.

Such institution was incorporated in 1824. When, upon the death of Mr. Brackett, in 1825, it was learned that no provision was contained in his will for further endowing the academy in Hampton, the trustees of that institution became aware that Parson Abbott had outwitted them. Just what were the grounds of the action brought by them against the trustees of the Brackett academy, to recover from that institution the money given it by Mr. Brackett, have not been inquired into, but it is ventured that Parson Abbott was charged with unduly influencing the aged benefactor, with having tickled his pride with the proposition of naming for him an academy to be located in Greenland, if he gave the money to aid in the enterprise; that the intention was, on the part of the donor to give money to the Hampton academy, which he supposed he was doing but was misled, etc. Anyway, the "tees without a trust" had a hard time of it; not only did they have on their hands the contest with the Hampton people, but also had more or less difficulty upon the death of Mr. Brackett, in securing control of the gift, on account of the opposition of some of the heirs. One in particular, was somewhat strenuous, even obstreperous in his opposition. Thus, Greenland's poet tells it in rhyme:

"* * * For before the door he took his stand.
 And with a pitchfork in his hand, he bade them stay.
 'I've some rights; my father's dying! keep away
 You hungry leeches! find some other prey.'"

One of the stories still current in Greenland, about Esquire George is as follows: With old "Star-of-the-Buttons," he used to drive to a bank in Portsmouth, whose clerks would come to wait on him where he sat in his wagon. On one occasion, after the clerks had waited on him, he summonsed them again, by pounding on his wagon as his custom was, to inform them that a mistake had been made in counting the money given him. The clerks told him that no mistakes were corrected after the money had once left the bank. "Very well," answered Esquire George, "the mistake is in my favor. Get up, Old Star-of-the-Buttons."

When the War of the Revolution commenced he was in his prime in point of years; during the contest he was a faithful supporter of the cause of the colonists. But few men in the province had more at stake, in a financial way, on the outcome of the war, than did he. In December, 1775, he was appointed one of the town's committee of safety, in which position he was continued until December, 1777. He seldom held any town office. In the year 1786, he was one of the selectmen. No greater honor within the gift of his townsmen could have been conferred upon him than his election as delegate from the town, in 1791, to the convention which revised the constitution of the state.

It has not been learned in what business he made his wealth; it is known that he was a successful and prosperous farmer. He gave freely to good purpose during his life, and possessed a large estate at the time of his death, June 23, 1825, in the eighty-eighth year of his age. During his life he was closely identified with the interests and prosperity of the town, had the welfare of its people at heart and bestowed gifts upon them to the benefit of their posterity.

He married December 13, 1764, Ann March, born in 1743, died November 16, 1823, daughter of Clement; he was born in 1707, was a physician of Greenland, married Elinor Veazey, will proved in June, 1777, was son of Israel; he was born April 4, 1683, was a physician of Greenland, married Mary, daughter of Joseph Hall, of Greenland, died in 1729, was son of George; he was born about 1646, lived in Newbury, Mass., married June 12, 1672, Mary, daughter of John Folsom, of Exeter, was son of Hugh; he sailed from South Hampton, England, April 24, 1638, in the "Confidence," and settled at Newbury, Mass., married Judith, who died December 14, 1675, died November 12, 1693. FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John, Benning.

Benning Brackett was born March 24, 1745, in Greenland. By his father's will he became possessed of "land in Stratham bought of Peter Coffin; 70 acres in New Market bought of Joseph Smart; $\frac{1}{4}$ of sawmill at Wadleigh's falls and right in grant in Durham, called Symond's grant." He settled on the seventy acres in New Market in the Ash Swamp district, south part of the town. Young Benning became the owner of this considerable estate when he was sixteen years old; he required it all for the support of his numerous children. During the War of the Revolution he was a resident of New Market. The records of the War Department fail to disclose that he rendered any military service; however, it is found that in March, 1776, he was a signer to a protest to the appointment of one Folsom as an officer of

SEVENTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 4.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John, George, Thomas.

Thomas Brackett was born April 6, 1773. Few persons in Greenland are there to-day but who have heard of Thomas Brackett, and the old residents of the town can well remember him. He was past the age of fifty years when his father died, and at the time was the surviving child of all of Esquire George's children. The well known benevolence of Esquire George, and his willingness to believe what pretentious persons told him, made him an easy victim to their wiles, could they but get his ear. His son and heir well knew and understood the imposters, and assumed to protect his aged father from the cunning ones seeking funds for societies and institutions. "My grandfather," wrote Mr. Simeon S. Brackett, "sent his daughter Mary Ann to guard the old gentleman from their importunities. Finally they became so bold that Thomas, himself, stood guard, rifle in hand, determined to shoot the first one who passed a rope which he had stretched across the lane."

Knowing full well how unprincipled were these beggars, Mr. Brackett did not stop with warning them away; they were men he knew very well, and he made them feel his resentment in many ways; he was a good hater and in these instances had just cause for hatred; their cant and pretentious motives were a poor screen against his attacks. The schemers for the Brackett academy fund were successful; the proposed name, perhaps, was what enabled them to wheedle the old gentleman out of the money he donated. The gift he made about two years before his death; it consisted of a wood lot in the town of Ossipee, which sold for two thousand dollars. The deed was made to trustees; they found no flower-strewn path to travel, because of the opposition and indignation of Mr. Thomas Brackett. One of the trustees, a Mr. Stephen Pickering, he often expressed his contempt for—gave him a lick with the rough side of his tongue when he passed him. One of their meets is thus described by Mr. Otis Hall:

• • • • •
 "Stephen Pickering here
 Once lived a while and owned and kept a store, quite near

• • • • •
 Here one fast-day he was hung
 Before the store in effigy, and there he hung
 All day. Across the back was seen in letters plain 'Think on thy latter end.' He had a thirst for gain,
 Which made him enemies. He represented once
 The town, and went to Concord; there was not the dunce
 That some do show themselves. But Thomas Brackett gave
 The hint; was the 'good friend' one might not wish to crave;
 Took ev'ry opportunity remarks to make,
 For Brackett hated well—as women hate a snake.
 So, one bright June morning Brackett met the stage
 For Concord, at the Stratham Lane, and, looking sage,
 Addressed the driver slowly as he said: 'I see You've got Bill Guppy there inside; well, let him be;

But keep him safe, and when you get to Concord, take Him quickly to state prison where he cannot make More trouble.' Pickering uttered not a single word."

Stephen Pickering was the founder of a bank in Wolfboro, N. H., and was accused of having been instrumental in wrecking it. Thomas Brackett was unsparing in his denunciations of Pickering for his fraudulent acts, and had no hesitation in speaking his opinion of him. Pickering was a cousin of Brackett's wife, Polly.

Thomas Brackett was tall, broad-shouldered, weighed over three hundred pounds. Was a graduate of Phillips Exeter academy. He inherited a good estate from his father including the homestead in Greenland. His home was frequented by the best of Portsmouth and the state. One of his grandchildren wrote, "I can just remember seeing Commodore Decatur (died in 1876), Levi Woodbury and Governor Goodwin at his house, together with many others, whose names I do not remember."

Levi Woodbury was also governor of the state in 1823-4; he and Mr. Brackett were great friends and with his family several times a year visited at the old mansion house. Mr. Brackett was a good entertainer, enjoyed the part of host, and few in his day filled it better than he. His friendship was dearly prized and long remembered. He was not a person to wear away his life in sorrow because of any fancied wrong or because of actual misfortune; he had a great cause for complaint, particularly against men whom he had a right to expect would conserve his interests instead of seeking to secure bounties from his aged and kind-hearted father; he was a good hater it is true, but hated well only for good cause. Always lived in Greenland; died July 2, 1851. Married February 1, 1797, Polly (Mary) Pickering, of Newington, born in 1776, died June 17, 1861, daughter of Nicholas; he was born in 1727, will dated November 7, 1807, proved January 16, 1809, married Mary (daughter of William and Sarah Langdon, of Portsmouth), was son of Thomas; he was born November 28, 1703, died December 9, 1786, married February 7, 1727, Mary (daughter of Colonel Downing), was son of Thomas; he lived in a log cabin near the shore of Great bay on the farm that was his father's, died in 1719-20, was son of John, the immigrant; he was in Portsmouth as early as 1633, signed deed for a glebe with Anthony Brackett, had several grants of land, one of five hundred acres on Great bay afterwards owned by his son Thomas; in 1862, one hundred-seventy acres of the tract was owned by James C. Pickering; it descended in male line to him, it never having been deeded; John Pickering died January 18, 1669. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 6.

From Family No. 3. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John, Benning, Daniel.

Daniel Brackett was born August 6, 1778, in New Market. In his day he was famous for his weight which at one time was five hundred pounds; was known as the New Hampshire giant. He wore a belt six inches wide about his waist to hold himself in shape. Received offers from managers of circuses to exhibit himself as the Fat Man, but declined, having other ambitions in life. In the spring of 1837, he left his home to visit relatives and stopped for a time with his son Joseph, whose residence known as the "Hill place" is on the road from Rockingham junction to New Market. While visiting there the weather became warm; for the purpose of his comfort he removed his coat, and in his shirt sleeves sat in front of the house; it was on a day that he considered a very warm one. Thus exposed he was stricken with pneumonia, then called inflammation of the lungs, which proved fatal. He died April 4, 1837. To admit the coffin into the house it was necessary to enlarge the doorway; was buried in the family cemetery on the Benning Brackett farm, on the Ash swamp road in New Market. In his youth Greenland's rhymer met the giant, and thus he writes of him—

"One caught my wondering eye, and that was Daniel B.
 'Twas on the P'rade near by the parish church one day,
 The time that I remember seeing him. The way
 Was broad, and all the voting men were out,
 And he on hand to get a drink and look about.
 But how to describe him! weight, five hundred pounds or more
 And shaped like a toad; I looked him o'er.
 He filled the wagon seat he was so monstrous fat
 And all humped up a mass of flesh and bones; he sat,
 And had to wear a leather belt full one foot wide,
 To keep his bowels up in place so he could ride.
 His wagon had no springs except strips of oak
 That ran from axle tree to rocker; never broke
 Because so stiff and strong. They had but little spring;
 Of rude construction; it was not a handsome thing.
 To make a meal for supper, as the story went,
 A loaf of brown bread and a pot of beans he sent Into his anxious stomach, where a pan of milk
 Soon filled the aching void. Then feeling fine as silk,
 And thinking how another good square meal would taste
 He pulled himself together round about the waist
 And then slept * * *."

He lived on the Haven farm, "down Sodom road which leads from Pickering's mill;" later lived in Tuftonboro. Married (1st) Sarah Norris. Married (2nd) Mehitable Wiggin, born August 28, 1771, died in 1868; parents resided in Stratham. Issue:

From Family No. 8. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, John, George, Thomas, George, George E.

George Edwin Brackett was born April 5, 1830; died October 3, 1880; married June 26, 1852, Mary Elizabeth Gee Pickering, who died March 10, 1884. Was a farmer in Greenland; resided on the estate which belonged to his ancestor, George, son of John, as "Rambles about Greenland" reads:—

"Adjoining these we come to George Ed Brackett place,
That handed down through generations six we trace
The Brackett Blood, and find a Captain Thomas B.
Comes first and then a George and then a Thomas B.
A second time; then comes a George and George Ed. B.
A second time. The scene is beautiful; the bay
As blue as blue can be, and on a sunny day
It makes me wish to be a duck or goose and sail
Away from all that makes life wearisome and frail.
The place is not the place it was when Thomas died —
The farm of all the farms and so the boast and pride
Of all around. Much of the land's been sold and gone
To other parties; thus the moving world moves on."

It was a Captain John Brackett who came first. Issue:

1. George Edwin, b. 27 Sept., 1869; mar. Phila Leach; home, in Greenland. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 18.

Simeon Smith Brackett was born February 11, 1848, in Greenland, N. H., where he has resided since, except of a short period when he dwelt in Roxbury, Mass.; is a dealer in lumber and grain; has served as chairman on the board of selectmen and for several years as trustee of the Congregational church society. Mr. Brackett has a chest, believed to have been the property of one of the daughters of Anthony, the immigrant, and made or purchased for her use at the time of her marriage; it is about five feet in length, and two and one-half feet in height; is made in a very substantial manner, and though it has had rough usage at some time, is well preserved and intact. He also has a sword which has been in the family for many years — for over one hundred-fifty years at least. Mr. Brackett is of the opinion that the sword belonged to Lieutenant Joshua Brackett, of the third generation; he wrote:—"neither do I know anything about the sword beyond Squire George's father passing it along to him as a sacred relic with instructions to keep it in the Brackett name." Squire George's father, Captain John Brackett, was himself a soldier, and for years commanded fort William and Mary, and perhaps the sword was his. Whether the sword was Lieutenant Joshua's or Captain John's, it has passed into very good hands where its value is fully appreciated. The writer is indebted to Mr. Brackett for a good many favors in the compiling of this history. Married October 10, 1877, Sarah Abby Barrell, born June 29, 1846, daughter of Charles Colborn Barrell and wife, Sarah Johnson Cutts, of York, Me. Issue:

DIVISION NO. 14.

SAMUEL BRACKETT OF NEW MARKET AND
HIS DESCENDANTS.

FIFTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter VII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Samuel.

Samuel Brackett was born in Greenland, N. H., about 1705; he lived the greater portion of his life, and died, in New Market; was a resident of that town prior to 1740. Public records are the sources of information for facts pertaining to this man's life; no descendant of his has affirmed anything concerning him. His father devised to him a one-half interest in the property at Wadleigh's falls. His house was near the mill on this property. The town record relative to the laying out of a road by the selectmen, describes the place where his house stood. A copy of the record is here given to enable those to locate the former site of the house who may wish to do so. It reads—"New Market, March 31, 1752. We, the subscribers have laid out an open publick highway from Lamperell river landing place at the watter side to the line between said New Market and Durham, at that place in said line where Wadleys way (so called) crosses said line; laid out two rods broad as the way now goes and bounded as follows from said watter side up the path on the southerly side of Mr. Joseph Smiths house and Deacon Joseph Judkins house, and on the north of Mr. William Talors house to Piscasick bridge and then on betwene Mr. Samuel Bracketts house and barn to the north of Mr. John Bennicks (Bennetts) house, and between Samuel Rawlings house and barn, and between Mr. Samuel Aseleys barn and Mr. Joseph Smarts house, and so on as the path now goes on the north of Mr. John Palmers house, and so on as the path now goes to said line between said New Market to said Durham."

His name appears several times on the town records of New Market. March 19, 1744, he was allowed twenty shillings old tenor, on an account he had against the town; signed petition dated March 12, 1752, for highway from New Market to Wadleigh's falls; March 29, 1756, appointed a surveyor of highways; again appointed March 28, 1757; signed petition dated January 18, 1760, for highway between Epping and New Market; also signed petition March 5, 1766, for landing place at Lamperel river "which has been upwards of 100 years as such, to become town property and protected as such."

The date of his death is not known; his estate was probated in 1767. Through some oversight the public record pertaining to it was not properly indexed, if indexed at all, and until the last few years it was not known by those living that any records as to his estate were extant. In the records are named his children who survived him; it is the only source of authority we have as to members of his family.

No mention of his wife is made; she had probably died before he did. Her maiden name has not come down to us. She was perhaps a Hilton or a Weeks. Issue, not in order of birth:

1. Elizabeth, who mar. Masson.
2. Keziah, who mar. Noah Lord.

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Samuel, Joshua.

Joshua was born probably in New Market, N. H. The date of his death is not known; the youngest child of his family of ten children, was born in 1784. He was a farmer and always lived in New Market. The first mention of his name contained in the town records, is as signer with his father to a petition dated March 5, 1766, for a "landing place at Lamperel river."

His military service in the War of the Revolution is not known with certainty, he perhaps was a member of a local militia company; in March, 1776, he was a signer to a protest to the appointment of one Folsom as lieutenant-colonel of the local militia regiment, of which he probably was a member. In 1775, at the beginning of the war he and his brother Ichabod, under contract with the provincial authorities, supplied "pinch wood" for use in constructing and repairing fortifications in Portsmouth harbor. Also in 1779, they filed an account of supplies for the use of the army furnished in that year.

Joshua was also a member of the West society; in 1778, with his brother Ichabod presented an application to the town clerk of New Market to have their names enrolled as members of that society. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Samuel, Ichabod.

Ichabod Brackett was born in New Market, N. H., in what year is uncertain; he was past the age of forty-five years in 1791; was appointed in 1767, administrator of his father's estate, hence was, perhaps, his eldest son. The first mention of his name in the town records, is under date of March 29, 1764, when he was appointed by selectmen to a minor town office. In the same year on May 1, he presented to the provincial assembly a petition whose purpose is not disclosed—perhaps some measure of relief; it was denied. In 1778, he petitioned the town clerk to become a member of the "West society;" it was a religious organization independent of, and, in its beginning, much at variance with, the old Congregational society of the town, not alone on doctrinal points. The place of worship of the West society was at New Market plains about a mile above the bridge across the Pacassic river, close by which was the farm that belonged to his father; when Ichabod lived on the farm he was a member of the West society. Its first pastor was Rev. Mr. Nathaniel Ewer who remained with it in that capacity for fifty-four years. Ichabod moved to the south part of the town where lived his wife's people; the locality is known as the "Four corners." He signed petition dated March 23, 1784, for appointment of magistrate for New Market; no subsequent mention of his name in the town records. The census of 1790, shows him a resident of the town of Canterbury, N. H., with a family, which, as appears by that census, consisted of one male under the age of sixteen years and three females, probably his wife and two unmarried daughters. In 1795, he removed to Caledonia county, Vermont; in the county in which he resided he held the office of sheriff.

There has been nothing published to show that Ichabod Brackett served as a soldier in the War of the Revolution. However, there is this known, that he with his brother Joshua in 1775, furnished "pinch wood and other combustibles" for fire-rafts to be used for the defense of Portsmouth harbor; the bill which they presented to the provincial assembly was for labor of men and oxen procuring "pinch" wood, etc. The date of his death has not been learned.

Married Mary Hilton; she was born February 14, 1737, was daughter of Edward, name of wife unknown, died in October, 1776, was son of Richard; he married his cousin Ann Hilton; he was son of Captain William Hilton, and she was daughter of his brother Edward, who was born in 1626 in Exeter, N. H., died April 28, 1699, married Ann Dudley, was son of Edward; he was the immigrant, name of wife is unknown, was without doubt a younger son of Baron Hilton and was born at Hilton castle, Wearmouth, Durham county, England.

Ann Dudley was born October 16, 1641, in Salisbury, Mass., was daughter of Rev. Samuel; he was born about 1606, at Canon's Ashby, Northamptonshire, England, died February 10, 1683, in Exeter, N. H., married in 1632 Mary Winthrop, was son of Governor Thomas; he was born at Canon's Ashby about 1576, died December 31, 1653, at Roxbury; married Dorothy Yorke; commanded a company of Northshiresmen at siege of Amiens; was steward to the Earl of Lincoln until 1630, when he became a Puritan; came to America with Gov. Winthrop; was chosen assistant and deputy governor; and in 1634, 1640, 1645, and again in 1650, was chosen governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony.

Mary Winthrop, born in 1612, died April 16, 1643, was daughter of Governor John Winthrop; he was born January 12, 1587, was from Groton manor, Suffolk, Eng., married March 16, 1605, Mary (only child of John Forth, of Great Stanbridge, Essex county, Eng.), was son of Adam Winthrop; he was born August 10, 1548, at Groton Manor, married February 29, 1579, Anne (daughter of Henry Brown, of Edwardstone, Suffolk, Eng.), died in March, 1623, was son of Adam; he was born October 9, 1498, in Lavenham, Eng., married July 20, 1534, Agnes (daughter of Robert Sharpe), died November 9, 1562, was son of Adam; he married in 1498, Joan Burton. Issue:

1. Simeon, mar. 24 Dec., 1789, Betsey Eastman and lived in Concord, N. H.; removed to Caledonia, Vt.; it has not been learned that he had any male issue.

3. Ichabod. See family 10.

5. Perhaps dau. Mary.

FAMILY NO. 4.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Samuel, John.

John Brackett was born in New Market. Little that is authentic is known of him. From the town records it appears that he was appointed March 29, 1762, surveyor of highways; March 28, 1763, fence viewer; with his brothers and cousin Benning Brackett, signed

February 1, 1768, petition for school. It appears from the probate records that he shared in the division of his father's estate. It is thought by the writer that he was the John Brackett who died before 1691, in middle life, on Peak's island. The island at the time was owned by an uncle of John Brackett, viz., Anthony Brackett, whose son Thomas, about the age of John, lived on the island. It will be observed that there is no disparity in the meager fact we have to preclude the identity of the one with the other. If identical he was the John Brackett who married Sarah —; upon his death she removed to Wellfleet, Mass., where the census of 1790 shows her dwelling with one male under the age of sixteen years. Issue:

1. Samuel. See family 11.

Oscar Bernhadotte Brackett was born March 22, 1812, in Salina, N. Y.; was the eldest of his father's family. He received a collegiate education, and through the early death of his parents he and his brothers respectively, came into the possession of a fortune, upon acquiring their majority. In 1844, he removed to Texas and in 1845, to the city of San Antonio, where he continued to reside until his death. Though he had parted with the greater portion of his fortune, he had remaining ample means for his business enterprises, and they were extensive and hazardous. He founded the town of Brackettville in Kinney county, Texas; this was in 1852, but a few years before his death. In 1852, the region in Texas west of San Antonio was little better than a wilderness, and San Antonio itself was then about the size of Brackettville in 1887, which, with fort Clark, contained 1,500 inhabitants. As early as 1834, a settlement had been attempted at Dolores, in Kinney county but had been abandoned because of trouble with the Indians. In 1852, on Las Moras creek, Mr. Brackett erected a trading post for the accommodation of the few men of the region. During the same year the construction of fort Clark, by the government, was commenced on the creek opposite to the site of his post. Through the patronage of Mr. Brackett, good dwellings were erected and the town was founded, now the county seat of Kinney county. He died December 2, 1857. Long after his death articles in praise of his social qualities and business activities and enterprises appeared from time to time in San Antonio papers. Married May 16, 1833, Emily Wood, youngest daughter of General Thaddeus M. Wood, of Onondaga (now Syracuse), N. Y. Issue:

DIVISION NO. 15.

ANTHONY BRACKETT OF FALMOUTH AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FIFTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter VII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Anthony.

Anthony Brackett was born in 1707, in Greenland, N. H. He was eight years old, when in 1715, shortly after hostilities with the Indians had ceased, settlers commenced to return to devastated Falmouth, his future home. It was not until three years subsequently to the close of Lovewell's war that he took up his abode in the town where his great-great-grandfather had settled nearly one hundred years prior to his going there to dwell. His father Joshua Brackett, had secured recognition from the government of his title to the large tracts of land on the Neck, which he claimed as heir of his parents, Thomas Brackett and Mary Mitton. This estate Joshua designed for his sons, Anthony and Joshua, and during the long interval of peace with the Indians, beginning with 1725, they went to Falmouth and took possession of it.

In the First Congregational church of Scarborough, Me., on February 14, 1734, Anthony was united in marriage to Sarah Knight, the Rev. Mr. Wm. Sargeant officiating. It has not been learned with certainty who her parents were. The six older children of Anthony were the fruit of this marriage. After the death of his first wife he married (intention published November 5, 1756,) Keranhappuck Hicks, nee Proctor, daughter of Samuel and wife, Sarah Brackett (see chapter VI); she survived him thirty-seven years and died in 1822.

Nearly all of his property was real estate. On the Neck he had, in addition to other tracts, a farm on which he resided; during his life it increased much in value. He also owned the greater and more valuable portion of Peak's island and this he conveyed shortly before his death, to his son Thomas; he also conveyed to said son and to third parties, tracts of land on the Neck including his homestead. His second wife had ideas of her own relative to the disposition of his estate and somewhat strenuously opposed him in the matter of parting with his farm on the Neck. Possibly it was her foresight to prospects of future values of these lands, whose magnitude can now be realized, to be enjoyed by their descendants, if conserved for them, which prompted her to resist him in his plan and to thwart him in what she could. She was the descendant of a man who feared not the loss of his life in his efforts to save from torture the victims of the Salem-witchcraft madness. With such blood in her veins, she was not to be turned from the course of her sense of duty for the welfare of her children. And he—well, Anthony was the descendant of George Cleeve, whose determination to win always compassed his purpose. A contest between the two was probably as near an approach to a contact between an irresistible force and an immovable body, relative to results, as can well be imagined. There was but one course as neither husband nor wife would bend to the will of the other; he sold the land and she refused to sign the deed—was immovable, and he irresistible. Like the dust from the destruction of a comet a hundred years ago, yet lingering in space, cobweb notions still find their way into the brains of the descendants of the two, that out of their clash an estate in those lands will some day be theirs. Out of the tracts of land conveyed by Anthony by deeds which his wife did not sign, upon his death two years later, a dower interest was set aside to her. From the time of his death in 1784, to her death in 1822, the widow enjoyed the rents, issues and profits of the tracts so set aside; her stepson Thomas, each year paid to her a rent for the use of her dower estate in Peak's island. She had endowment of traits which well equipped her for securing her rights in her husband's estate whatever they were. Upon her death, possession of the tracts set aside as her dower, passed under the deeds made by her husband to the grantees named in them, or to such persons as claimed under them, as the possession of the dower tract on Peak's island passing to the heirs of Thomas Brackett, instance. Her dower right could not pass to her heirs. There may have been tracts in which she had title in fee simple, that were of little value during her life, and which in time became the property of others through adverse possession, and such estates, or, some other property right in her, misled some of her descendants into the belief that to some land which she claimed, as her heirs they had title as against others who claimed and occupied it by what right soever.

It is difficult to explain how so many of her descendants became convinced, or inclined to believe, that as her heirs they had an estate in fee simple in lands in which she had but a dower interest. About 1858, a lawyer whose knowledge of the law must have been obtained in an empirical way, though not always at his client's expense, proposed to recover for the heirs of Keranhappuck Brackett the tracts of land set apart from her husband's estate as dower, upon condition that he was to pay the expenses of the suit to be brought for the purpose, and was to receive one-half of all he recovered. This was agreed to.

What was the lawyer's view as to the title of the heirs in said tracts, is evident from that he based the suit in equity which he brought in their behalf to recover the same, solely upon the fact that the widow did not sign the deeds conveying said tracts, and during her widowhood had possession of them by right of dower. As the lawyer was paying the costs of the suit (had paid $500 he stated), he rested quite content upon learning from the trial court that a dower interest in land does not survive the widow whose right it was. He may have talked about taking an appeal to the supreme court, but never entered any. There were many descendants who believed that the lawyer settled the suit to his advantage and that the interests of the heirs were sacrificed.

The suit came to an end in 1862. No concerted move on the part of the claimants was again made until 1902. During the intervening forty years, as probably during the preceding forty, there was much talk about the "widow's dower" and "our rights." In 1902, a committee was appointed to search records and other sources of information for data as to the foundation of the claim for "our millions." From time to time appeared in the daily papers published in Maine, flaring headlines containing more information in them than was contained in the accounts that followed, relative to said claim, and the proceedings of the committee. It seems there was no need of search for data more than an inspection of the records of the circuit court of Cumberland county; there was to be found about all that was necessary and that which was quite determinative of the matter. However, recourse was taken to certain musty deeds sold at one time as junk. This supposed "find" served well for advertising purposes; there were more headlines in the dailies. Much was made out of the matter in a talkative way until was given the opinion of an able jurist who had been employed by the committee, and who relied upon an examination of the court records for his knowledge of the case, to the effect that if peaceable possession under a deed made by one having title in fee simple to the land in question, for over forty years, was good title forty years ago, a fortiori, peaceable possession under the same deed for forty years longer was still a good title at the present time. He did not discuss the idea of a freehold estate growing out of a dower interest, and as for said musty deeds, returned them to the committee. Thus ended the "widder's dower contest" until the cycle of another forty years is completed.

The last effort was fruitful in no one thing more than the crop of "Brackett heirs" so called, which sprang up like weeds, when was made known the news about "those millions." Parties wrote to the committee claiming to be heirs of Anthony Brackett, no matter what particular Anthony. Some of the letters were delivered to the writer, by the committee, with the view of learning if the parties were descendants of the particular Anthony. Some of the parties would not take no for an answer as to their being "an heir," and demanded explanations from the writer as to why they were not a descendant of Anthony Brackett, to whom they would have been no greater kin than sixteenth cousin were he living. Those who were most sure of a "fortin" were certain Bracketts living in Canada, one of whom implored the writer "to be a man and let me in," and added that his sister was "going to Washington and would look you up." It transpired that the Washington to which the sister journeyed, was Washington state—quite a distance from the home of the writer, who thus escaped being "looked up."

One of the nineteen persons who contributed the total of $95 to pay the expense of the investigation made in 1902, cautioned the chairman of the committee not to let "Honorable Thomas B. Reed know" he had paid anything. Thus the great man's advice that there was no foundation to the claim, passed for naught, as did the information freely given by the writer to certain other contributors that they were not descendants of Anthony Brackett, who at one time owned the land concerning which there was so great an ado.

It is probable that, for quite two hundred years there have been traditions with the several branches of the family living in Maine, concerning tracts of land in Falmouth which belonged to George Cleeve, to which title was asserted by members of early generations without avail; thus is accounted for the fact that many persons have stated that in the families of their forefathers it was contended that there were large estates belonging to Bracketts which they did not get. Hence, the wildfire spread from Nova Scotia to Washington and Oregon of the news of a concerted effort of a few of the descendants of Anthony Brackett to recover the widow's dower. A material result realized was this, that through persons making inquiry to the committee, lines of descent were established of certain ones whose ancestry was a difficult task to trace, and the whereabouts of members of the family were learned of which there was little hope of discovering.

Anthony and his brother Joshua were prominent in Falmouth in social and business affairs. Their estates extended from one side of the Neck to the other near its base. The house of Anthony stood at the corner of Danforth and Brackett streets in Portland, which latter street ran through his farm. The dwelling house of two stories, mentioned as the mansion house, faced towards the south; in its rear stood the barn, and in front of it was an orchard on the slope of a hill. Joshua's house stood on Congress street near High street. This house, which was burned subsequently to his death, he built after he had dwelt for several years in a log house which stood where Gray street is. In the log house the brothers lived at the time of Anthony's marriage in 1733. They had dwelt in Falmouth since 1728, the year following that in which administration was granted on the estate of their grandfather, Thomas Brackett, who was killed in 1679. Between their houses was a swamp through which was a foot-path. The division line between their estates was along Grove and Congress streets. Anthony's included nearly all the land on the southeast side of Congress street from about opposite Casco to Vaughan street, and a lot of nearly fifty acres on the westerly side of Grove street running from Congress street to the alms house farm. Joshua's land lay on the northwest side of Congress street extending from Grove street easterly. Portions thereof he deeded to his daughters. For his daughter, Sarah, whose first husband was Daniel Wood, he built a frame house, the original site of which is that of the Y. M. C. A. building; its present site is the rear of the property of Henry L. Taylor on Oak street; the building is used as a storehouse for paints and varnishes. In its issue of November 28, 1896, "The Argus" presented its picture as the oldest dwelling in the city, "and the only one (of farm houses) which stands on the same lot that it stood on when it was a farm house."

In the early days of his dwelling in Falmouth, Joshua was engaged in shipping wood to Boston; he said that he worked many nights by moonlight in order to have sufficient wood ready for the coaster when she returned. Of his wife nothing more is known than that her Christian name was Abigail.

Situated as their dwellings were upon the outskirts of the settlement on the Neck and at the edge of the primeval forest of the mainland, separated by swamps and surrounded by woods, the brothers and their families were subject to extreme danger of attacks by the Indians. Prior to the coming of the brothers to Falmouth, the town had been settled for nearly a century; during one-fourth of the time it had been forsaken by its inhabitants whose homes were desolated.

Then sixteen years passed before there was another war with the Indians, and for the first time the homes of the brothers were menaced with the horrors of Indian warfare. Yet for all of their exposed situation, it is not known that their houses or buildings were ever burned or that any member of their families was either killed or taken. Hostile Indians were seen in the swamp and near their homes on more than one occasion during the years from 1744 to 1748, and a few years following 1755. The brothers must have been skillful woodsmen and well fitted to battle with their hardy foes, to come off as well as they did. On the roll of Captain James Milk's company, under date of May 10, 1757, appears the name of Anthony; in the alarm list of that company appears the name of Joshua. The latter was the elder of the two; though at the time Anthony was fifty years of age, he was not too old for active duty in those days, while Joshua was available when the alarm was given of an expected attack by the Indians.

Anthony was seventy-seven years of age at the time of his death September 10, 1784. He was buried on his farm in the course of Summit street as subsequently laid; his remains were removed to the Brackett cemetery on Peak's Island, and at the head of his last resting place was erected a marble memorial stone. There was a tradition that he had taken out a sound front tooth; upon an inspection of the remains when exhumed, the absence of the tooth served to identify his body.

In the mansion house were set apart rooms for the use of his widow; she occupied them but a few years; she resided in Gorham where settled at least three of her children, and at the time of her death in 1822, she was living with a son of her daughter Meribah. Her convictions of right and duty were second only to her determination of purpose in carrying them into practice even at the cost of a lifetime's effort or of life itself. Like traits of character had her grandfather, John Proctor, whose efforts to stem the tide of prosecution of harmless and defenseless old women on the charge of witchcraft in Salem, cost him his life, as he, himself, fell a victim to the orthodoxy of that day and place.

It will be noted that Anthony named his six known sons for his six brothers. It is believed that the Anthony Brackett mentioned with his children was also his son; the writer has nothing certain as to his parentage. But it is not known of whose family he could have been a member unless he was of Anthony's family among whom he is placed. The gallant fellow lost his life while serving as a soldier in the Continental army. Issue:

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Anthony, John.

John Brackett was born in Falmouth in 1734; he was in the tenth year of his age when war commenced between the colonists and the Indians which continued for six years. Situated as was his father's home, it was the theater of war alarms; so this boy at an early age knew its danger signals and before the close of hostilities was able to respond to them. There were four years of peace when commenced the Seven years' war, though the Indians in Maine did not take any active part until 1756. His name appears in a list dated May 10, 1757, of the members of Captain James Milk's Falmouth Neck company. As Maine furnished her full proportion of the troops from the colony of Massachusetts which took part in the campaigns of 1758, 1759 and 1760 against the French and Indians, there is little reason to doubt that he saw active service in these years. In 1762, he purchased a tract of land at Saccarappa in Falmouth and began at farming; was a surveyor and laid out the highway between Saccarappa and Gorham; was captain of the local company of militia and held that rank when commenced the War of the Revolution. The express from Boston arrived at Falmouth before the break of day of April 21, 1775, with the news of the battle of Lexington. Before the sun went down that day Captain Brackett with his company of minute men was on the way to Cambridge; the town of Wells was reached when the company received orders to return to Falmouth. He recruited a company for service in the war and was commissioned its captain; the company was assigned to Colonel Edmund Phinney's regiment; among the privates were James Brackett, son of Joshua, Jeremiah Brackett, son of Anthony, and William Brackett, son of Thomas, all grandsons of Zachariah Brackett. The company left for Cambridge, July 3, 1775. Soon after it reached the seat of war Captain Brackett was taken ill and while on his way to his home he died at Ipswich, Mass., September 24, 1775. Married December 20, 1768, Mary Fabyan (see chapter VII). In September, 1776, she married Pelatiah March, a tanner of Saccarappa. Issue:

1. John, b. in 1770. See family 7.

FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Anthony, Thomas

Thomas Brackett was born in Falmouth in May, 1744; was a farmer, also engaged in other pursuits. His father conveyed to him nearly all the estate which he possessed on the Neck and also the greater portion of Peak's island. He resided on the island from an early date, probably lived there during the War of the Revolution. There were then only three dwellings on the island one of which belonged to Benjamin Trott. No military service of Thomas Brackett is mentioned in any published records. That he did serve as a soldier, was a member of a local militia company, it would be unreasonable to doubt. When Captain Henry Mowatt with a British fleet on October 16, 1775, arrived in Portland harbor, he anchored near to Peak's island, in Hog Island roads between Hog and House islands and in sight of Thomas Brackett's home. Falmouth was defenseless and the greater portion of the town was destroyed by fire. At the breaking out of the war his family consisted of four small children, and early in the war the fifth child was born. He was a young man when the war commenced and the owner of a large estate. He probably did not serve in any organization that was subject to be, or was, called upon to perform duty at a distance from Falmouth.

There are facts which tend to indicate that he was born earlier than 1744. A Thomas Brackett in May, 1757, was a private in Captain James Milk's Falmouth Neck company. At the time there was but one other Thomas Brackett (son of Zachariah) in Falmouth and he resided at Morrill's corner. It is not thought that Thomas, the son of Anthony Brackett, would have been on the regular or active list of available men for military duty at the age of thirteen years as his age would have been in 1757, if he were born in 1744. A Thomas Brackett was baptized in Falmouth in 1737. Thomas, the son of Zachariah Brackett, was baptized in Hampton, New Hampshire.

However, the descendants of Thomas Brackett are authority in giving the year of his birth as 1744. Married December 9, 1762, Jane Hall, born in 1740, died May 10, 1810, daughter of Cornelius and wife, Elizabeth (perhaps White), of Cherryfield, Me. Died December 13, 1815. Issue:

Daniel Brackett was a son of Joshua Brackett who married Abigail Kendrick, of Halifax. In the records supplied the writer by the descendants of the other sons of Joshua, there is no mention of this Daniel Brackett as a son of Joshua; however, Mr. Lorenzo D. Brackett, of Lawrence, Mass., son of Joseph Brackett, son of James (who married Betsey Fabyan, and brother of Joshua who married Abigail Kendrick) wrote that his aunt Kezia married her cousin Daniel Brackett, the son of Joshua, and that said Joshua had sons Alfred, Daniel, Jerry, Lewis and John. It is not thought that Mr. Lorenzo D. Brackett is in error in this matter.

Daniel Brackett was born in Gorham; married August 5, 1812, his cousin, Kezia Brackett, born September 1, 1783, died about 1829, daughter of his father's brother James and wife, Mehitable Fabyan (see fam. 4, this div.); was a farmer; settled in Naples; died about 1824, soon after the birth of his son Rufus. DIVISION NO. 16.

JAMES BRACKETT. THE PEACEMAKER. AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FIFTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter VII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James.

It is our fortune to have a personal description and a protraiture of the characteristics and disposition of James Brackett from the pen of his grandson, Adino Nye Brackett, as follows:

"James * * * was born in the year 1714; he owned during his entire manhood one of the before described farms (one of the farms owned by his father Joshua Brackett) containing something over one hundred and fifty acres. James Brackett was a member of the Congregational church in Greenland, had a large family, and died November 13, 1803, at the age of eighty-nine years. He was commonly called Deacon James. I well remember him. He was a man remarkable for cheerfulness and kindness of his disposition, and in his neighborhood acquired the title of peacemaker. He was twice married: his first wife was Martha Cate, of Portsmouth, born September 5, 1718, and they were married May 24, 1739. The issue of this marriage amounted to thirteen, six sons and seven daughters. One of the sons named John died in his third year; all the rest lived to an advanced age. The time of the births of the children was given the writer of this article by James Brackett, himself, in his own handwriting, in the year 1800, three years before his death * * * (as hereafter given). The same paper contains the date of his first wife's death (November 16, 1778), she was something over sixty years old at that time and was respected as a very sensible Christian and every way virtuous woman, calculated to render the social circle happy and useful. The second wife, I remember. She died before his death; but neither the date of their marriage or of her death is given in the paper annexed. The last marriage took place after he was sixty years of age, and his second wife was a widow well stricken in years at the time. And I shall infer, though she appeared a respectable woman, that the last was by no means as happy a marriage as the first. (Here follows the family record.)

My grandfather, James Brackett, as long ago as I can remember, was a small cheerful man walking with the aid of two canes, laboring at the time and ever afterwards under the disease called sciatica, brought on by rheumatism, which, as I have been told, seized him at the age of fifty years, after which he never performed any manual labor. Prior to this attack he was represented as a very active and hard-working farmer. This, as he always appeared in easy circumstances, seemed necessary to bring up and educate so large a family. As I said before, he was a small man, as I should think not weighing the arrival of the first Winthrop in that enterprising colony. That they did not belong to the Plymouth colony, is proved by the fact that one of them settled at Braintree, a part of the Massachusetts, not the Plymouth colony. The descendants of this brother, it is believed, still remain in that town. Of the other two brothers, one settled at Falmouth in Maine and the other in Connecticut.

The origin of the family cannot be traced in authentic form to a period beyond that I have carried it as above set forth. But in English history, among others who held a place in Cambridge college, as one of its professors, was a man by the name of William Brockett, an enlightened instructor and a Welshman, who received on that or some other account, the honor of knighthood. Certain it is that the Bracketts were among the Crusaders, for they had their armorial bearings and amongst them the stag and the cross were represented. It is equally certain that to mark their out-of-doors property, the Bracketts have ever used the sign of the cross. This may prove them also to have been in ancient times faithful adherents of the Popish supremacy. But whether the present race of Bracketts spring from noble or ignoble blood, the fact is unquestionable that the New Hampshire branch of the family had for its ancestor the before mentioned Anthony Brackett. His name appears again in the history of New Hampshire along with that of John Brackett to a petition to Charles II, for the removal of Edward Cranfield, lieutenant governor of that province in the year 1683. They were then called of Portsmouth, Greenland was not constituted a separate town until the year 1715.

John Brackett had three if not more sons; John, Nathaniel and James. They were all settled on farms bordering on the southern shore of the Great Bay, an enlargement of the Piscataqua river, into which Exeter, Lamperel and Durham discharge themselves. This bay forms the northern boundary of Greenland and the water rises and falls in it the same at every flow and ebb of the tide. Were it not for this circumstance it might be taken for an inland lake. The tide adds nothing to its beauty though much to the variety of its appearance. The road from the upper parts of the state runs a mile from the southern shore of this bay, so that the farms and farm-houses along its borders, are now secluded from the public gaze, and form the most delightful residences for gentlemen of retiring habits. Even the hermit might here find his favorite abode. Such was and is the situation of the land on which Anthony Brackett fixed his final residence, for it would seem that he once lived near the ocean. Around and near him he settled his sons. A few only of his descendants remain on the favorite site of his chosen dwelling place. James, the youngest of John Brackett's sons was born," etc.

When the War of the Revolution commenced James Brackett was passed the age of sixty years. He was then a sufferer from rheumatism; but neither age nor physical infirmities, though unfitting him for service as a soldier, could dampen his patriotism. He was an ardent supporter of the colonists. Aged as he was he performed service in their behalf which qualifies his descendants to become members of patriotic orders whose membership is based upon descent from a sire who took part in the war. The town records of Greenland read:

"January 9, 1775, James Brackett, John Haven, William Weeks, Clement March and Greenleaf Clark chosen to be a committee to carry into execution such measures as were agreed upon and approved by the Continental congress."

January 20, 1777, James Brackett and six others named as a new committee of safety. April 12, 1777, James Brackett and Lieutenant David Simpson chosen as committee, to go to Durham and hire soldiers to serve for the town of Greenland in the Continental army.

He purchased in May, 1749, from his father Joshua Brackett, for seventy pounds, old tenor, a gore of land containing one-half acre, in Greenland, near Portsmouth, lying between the roads from Portsmouth to Exeter and to Hampton; this he presented to the Congregational church as a building site, and in 1756, a church building was erected which still stands on it. He was one of the selectmen of the town for the years 1762 and 1763.

His farm bordered on the southern shore of Great bay. From his father he inherited land as follows: the land purchased by his father "of the Urans and one-fourth part of the upland belonging to the home farm." His farm lay westerly of the home farm of his father. He purchased additional tracts and became a prosperous and successful farmer. The farm is now the property, by purchase, of one of his descendants, John H. Brackett. It is beautifully situated, having a front on the bay of nearly a mile in length and contains two hundred and fifty acres.

He married second, June 20, 1780, Mrs. Lucy Gerrish, nee Cutts, who died June 7, 1802, widow of Captain Samuel Gerrish.

By his will he gave to his two sons Joseph and James his one-half of the sawmill at Wadleigh falls; to Ebenezer, land in Epsom; to Joshua, the home farm in Greenland; to daughters Judith Clark, Mary Wiggin, Deborah Weeks, Prudence Haines and Comfort Neal, five shillings each; to daughter Martha Parrótt, three hundred Spanish dollars.

An effort, which proved unsuccessful, was made to learn the ancestry of Martha Cate, the first wife of James Brackett. Mrs. Grace B. Scott wrote—

"I do not know very much of the family of Martha Cate. I think her father may have been the Deacon John Cate, mentioned on page 163 of Hall's History of Greenland, and wife Judith, from the fact that the farm where Martha was reared, was a large one extending more than a mile along the highway, and Otis Hall says that Deacon John Cate was a large land owner. I know that the Andrew Cate spoken of in Hall's book was a nephew of Martha Cate Brackett. Andrew Cate's daughter, Mary Cate, a maiden lady, perhaps 90 years or more old, lived, and died about 25 years ago, in the old gambrel-roofed house a part of which still stands on the old farm. She could not remember what was her grandfather's name. In answer to my question she would say, 'I had eight great-aunts dear, and one on em married with a Goss and lived over there where your mother and little Johnnie Brackett does; and one married your grandsire and one married a Greenleaf and lived in Boston and some married one thing and some another.'

Evidently this was all she could remember. We used to laugh to hear Mary Cate call my brother 'little Johnnie Brackett' when he was a big six-footer weighing something over 200 pounds." Issue:

8. Prudence, b. on Tuesday, May 21, 1753, in Greenland; mar. (1st) Richard Haines; (2nd) Josiah Sanborn; d. 7 May, 1843. Prudence had a round face and dark eyes; she eloped with Haines, the mother at dawn catching a glimpse of the fleeing couple on horse back. The father objected to the match because he believed Haines was intemperate and that his daughter's lot with him would be one of poverty and homeless children. When he heard of the marriage he said to his wife that he had declared he would never give his daughter anything if she married Haines; "but" he added, "I never said you should not." So an outfit was prepared and by ox-team sent by the mother to the young couple in Canterbury. Her widow's portion was poverty and a large family. Not long after her husband's death, Jeremiah Calef, her sister Hannah's husband, met his friend Col. Josiah Sanborn, when the latter expressed a wish that he could find as good a stepmother for his children, as Calef had found for his. Calef replied that the widow Haines was one of the best women who ever lived, and added, after a pause, "and she is the poorest woman in Canterbury." Calef introduced Sanborn to the widow; the result was a happy marriage. Issue by husband, Richard Haines:

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Joseph.

Joseph Brackett was born July 14, 1740, in Greenland, N. H.; resided in the town until about 1773, when he removed to Lee, where dwelt his brother, Dr. James Brackett. Resided in Lee until 1789, when he sold his farm to his brother; this farm of one hundred acres was on the northern line of the town of New Market and on both sides of the Lamperel river. Purchased six hundred and forty acres in Lancaster, Coos county, N. H., about one hundred and thirty miles north from Lee across the White mountains. The shortest route was through "The Notch," a mountain pass. In March, 1788, he started from Lee on horseback and on arriving at the pass learned that the road could not be traveled with a horse; he pursued his way on foot with snowshoes along a path; over this route he went, continuously breaking through the crusts. After many tedious hours he reached Whipple's farm where he found a comfortable lodging; the following day he easily reached the dwelling of his brother-in-law, Captain John Weeks, in Lancaster. On the recommendation of Captain Weeks, land adjoining his farm was purchased by him. During the summer he remained in Lancaster and prepared a habitation for his wife and children to whom he returned in the fall to accompany them on their journey thither. He, with his family, left Lee for Lancaster, January 20, 1789, and were eleven days on the road. The journey was made with ox teams; the wagons were followed by the drove of stock. "Upon arriving at 'The Notch' such was the quantity of snow and height of drifts that the teams five or six in number, came to a halt, and before a forward movement could be made, parts of the loads had to be removed and left by the side of the road, if road it might be called. But great was the rejoicing when we reached the Whipple farm" (see manuscript narrative of Adino N. Brackett.)

In Lancaster he spent the remainder of his days engaged in farming and in the practice of law. Though his name is found affixed to petitions for public improvements, and he took an interest in town affairs, he did not aspire to the holding of any town office. He served as a soldier during the War of the Revolution; was lieutenant in the 16th company of New Hampshire cavalry; was a comrade of John Langdon and Major, afterwards General, John Sullivan in the capture of Fort William and Mary in Portsmouth harbor in December, 1774. Its capture was one of the incidents of the times which bespoke the warlike spirit of the people. Paul Revere went down to Portsmouth and harangued the Sons of Liberty until "they invaded Fort William and Mary and carried off the powder and cannon." They took prisoner the captain in charge and the small garrison, and carried away one hundred barrels of powder, fifteen cannon and all the muskets that could be found.

Married in May, 1770, Mary Nye, nee Weeks, who died in Lancaster July 15, 1814, age seventy years; she was a daughter of Dr. John Weeks and wife, Martha Wingate, of Hampton, N. H., daughter of Colonel Joshua Wingate, commander of the New Hampshire troops at the siege and capture of Louisburg in 1745. The first husband of the wife of Joseph Brackett was Adino Nye, of Hingham, Mass. Upon their marriage they removed to Georgetown, Me., where they resided until his death some three years later. They had two daughters, Elizabeth and Mary. The first named was never a member of the family of Joseph Brackett. She lived in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, with an aunt, Mrs. Bailey, the wife of an Episcopal clergyman, and married Lieutenant, afterwards Colonel, Mince of the British army who died in India; she died in England having never seen her mother since her childhood. Mary lived with her mother, married Nathaniel Goss of Greenland; he died in 1817. In 1821, the widow sold the farm and with her one son, Nathaniel, removed to Lancaster; the son lived in Lancaster until 1840, when with his sons, Nathaniel and Stickney and two daughters, all of his children, emigrated to Wisconsin. Lydia Goss, one of the five daughters of Mary, married William J. Brown, of Lancaster, with whom the mother resided.

Lieutenant Joseph Brackett died in Lancaster July 15, 1814.

FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Ebenezer.

Ebenezer Brackett was born November 28, 1743, in Greenland, N. H.; in 1772, settled on a farm in Epsom, N. H., where he resided continuously to his death April 13, 1826. Relative to his military service during the War of the Revolution, roll dated September 8, 1778, of Captain Robert Campbell's company, Colonel Moses Hazen's regiment, shows that he was enlisted for the war and "on command at Fish Hill." Other records show his name in "return of Colonel John McClary's of men for Portsmouth" as enlisted for service September 8, 1779; mustered for service at Portsmouth, September 27, 1779, by Colonel Wentworth for two months' service, and assigned to Colonel Dame's regiment to serve in defense of Portsmouth; by "order of the Committee of Safety." Married November 20, 1770, Abigail Clark, of Stratham, N. H., who died November 27, 1819. By his will dated December 8, 1806, he devised and bequeathed his farm to his wife during her life, upon her decease to his son-in-law, David Keniston, then to his son James Keniston and his heirs; to son James, one dollar "as he was well provided for;" to son Greenleaf Clark, one dollar to be paid in six months, and to son Hanover, one dollar to be paid in one year after the death of the testator, respectively; to each of his daughters small bequests; residue to his wife, to be disposed of as she might see fit. The witnesses to the will were Tufton Wiggin and Enoch Clark. Issue (not in order of birth):

FAMILY NO. 4.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, James.

Dr. James Brackett was born October 6, 1750, in Greenland, N. H. Early in life he removed to Lee, N. H., where he lived continuously until his death, May 28, 1803; was a resident of the town before the commencement of the Revolution. During the war he served as surgeon in Colonel Joseph Gale's regiment; was on the expedition in August, 1778, to drive the British from Rhode Island.

In Lee he lived on a farm; when his brother Lieutenant Joseph Brackett, removed from Lee to Lancaster, he sold to Dr. Brackett his farm in Lee. To them was willed by their father his interest in the sawmill at Wadleigh's falls; however, he did not survive his father.

Directly upon making his home in Lee the people began to confer such political honors upon him as were in their power. He was chosen selectman in 1777 and appointed parish clerk; in these offices he was continued until 1795. In the latter capacity one of his first acts was to spread on the town books data pertaining to his family, names of children, dates of births, the very hour of birth; what he wrote can still be read in his handwriting, and from this source we glean the information that the maiden name of his wife was Elizabeth Brackett, not Elizabeth Nye, as has been published; that she was a daughter of his uncle Anthony Brackett, of Portland. (see fam. 1, div. 15). To her he was married in May, 1774.

When the war was ended the people of the town had need of his service for legislative purposes. He was elected in 1785 representative from Lee to the provincial assembly of New Hampshire, and served continuously to 1789, when the province became a state of the Union. This quiet unassuming country gentleman was greatly beloved and respected by his people, and they had many reasons to be proud of their worthy representative. At the close of the long harassing war there were in nearly every town in the province, many maimed soldiers, homeless widows and children whose protectors had fallen on the battle field or died in prison. In the assembly there were military men who had won distinction. In those days lawyers were scarce in legislative bodies. Dr. Brackett was made chairman of the committee to which were referred claims of soldiers for indebtedness due them, and petitions for aid to relieve the wants of the widows and orphans. His appointment on this committee on which were three colonels, illustrates how highly he was esteemed in the assembly; his selection for it when there were so many colonels and majors who were members of the body, was a great honor to the country physician. Upon the petition of the people of Lee, made in August, 1785, he was appointed a justice-of-the-peace and upon his retirement from the legislative body in 1789, he was appointed one of the judges of the inferior court for Strafford county. What with his several offices, selectman, parish clerk, judge of the court and legislator, and occupations, physician, farmer and lumberman, he found his time well consumed, and probably enjoyed life and all its blessings. Occasionally, he, with his wife, went to Portland, where lived her parents. Among others of his acquaintances there, was Mr. Willis the historian. To him he related several matters pertaining to the family history. Among the papers of the historian was found a memorandum of his recollections of what the doctor had said as to who were the wives of Zachariah Brackett, Sr.

His will is dated November 28, 1802; to his wife he gave a life estate in all his property; to son James, $100; to daughter Sally, $100; to son John the remainder of his property and "ordained" that son Benjamin shall go to school in May, 1803, and continue until he should be sufficiently educated to enter on the study of physic. His widow survived him a few years; she died about 1807. Issue, all born in Lee:

Joshua Brackett was born May 29, 1755, in Greenland; inherited his father's farm on which he resided until his death, June 17, 1817; was a prosperous farmer. When the War of the Revolution commenced he was in the twenty-first year of his age. In June, 1775, signed the petition whose contents is set forth in the account of the life of his cousin, Thomas Brackett, (fam. 2, div. 17). Name appears in muster roll of men enlisted by Colonel William Whipple, by order of the general court, for the state of New Hampshire—"into the service of the American States to reinforce the army at New York. Mustered and paid by Joshua Wentworth (first regiment) September, 1776; entitled to bounty of six pounds." Record also shows that he served in September, 1776, in Captain Jonathan Robinson's company, 1st New Hampshire regiment. There was no Joshua Brackett in Greenland or Portsmouth other than he, to perform this service.

"Mary Weeks Brackett was a woman of as sweet and charming presence as I ever met. She had an unerring literary taste, had at her command the choicest specimens of English literature, of both prose and poetry, was keen in her perceptions of beauty both by education and natural endowment. I never knew a woman more loyal to family than was she; from her heart of hearts sprang the radiant smile of welcome to every Brackett and every Weeks. Her generous estimate of friends—and they were quite as numerous as the people she met,—was so spontaneous and eager that it was a starting point of 'health contagion' to every young head and heart that came under her influence. No more faithful wife and mother, no more constant and generous friend ever lived." Joseph Warren Brackett was born August 10, 1775, in Lee, N. H.; settled in New York, where he engaged in the practice of law; was a classmate of Daniel Webster at Dartmouth. In June, 1800, Joseph W. visited his brother, John W., at Lancaster, in company with Daniel Webster who one day, up Martin's Meadow hill, carried in his arms John W.'s infant son, Joseph W., then about three weeks old. To-day the descendants of the infant are numerous, and the relation of this incident is well stored in the minds of nearly all of them.

FAMILY NO. 9.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Joseph, Adino N.

Adino Nye Brackett was born November 1, 1777, in Lee, N. H.; in 1789, with others of his father's family, went to Lancaster, in which town he resided until his death, January 25, 1847. Was a farmer and land surveyor; was selectman of the town for fifteen years, representative in the state legislature for ten years, and clerk of the court of Coos county for twenty-seven years; was adjutant in the state militia. Married November 1, 1808, Mary Wiggin Weeks, daughter of John Weeks and wife, Deborah Brackett (see fam. 1, this div.). Mr. Brackett commenced a narrative of the life of his father, Joseph Brackett. It ends abruptly with the mention of the arrival of the family in Lancaster, in 1789. It is a standard source of authority relative to those matters the truth of which he affirmed, particularly as to vital statistics of the families of his father and grandfather and as to matters pertaining to the lives of either of them. It is not accountable how he had no accurate information relative to his great-grandfather, Joshua Brackett, whose name he does not mention, and so far as appears, knew nothing of. He was of the opinion, though he does not affirm it as a fact, that his great-grandfather was John Brackett, the son of Anthony Brackett, the immigrant. From his grandfather, Deacon James Brackett, he secured the data relative to his family, which he set forth in his manuscript as it is contained in this history. He mentions that he saw his grandfather, and he gives a description of his personal appearance. With such opportunity for securing the most reliable information obtainable relative to the ancestors of Deacon James Brackett, one would hesitate in writing that he was mistaken as to who were such ancestors, but that the authorities showing he was mistaken, are of the most conclusive character, and are as set forth in other parts of this history. Mr. Brackett possessed fair literary taste and ability and his powers of description of natural scenery are shown in a marked degree in his little work, which has been carefully preserved. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 10.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Joseph, James.

James Brackett was born March 31, 1782, in Greenland, N. H., at which time his parent's residence was in Lee, N. H.; was reared in Lancaster, N. H. Graduated from Dartmouth college, class of 1805, and on July 4th of that year delivered oration in the college chapel; commenced the study of law, and upon his admission to the bar removed, in 1808, to Cherry Valley, N. Y., to practice his profession; about this period he delivered the annual address before the principal society of Dartmouth. Resided in Cherry Valley for over forty years, and acquired an extensive acquaintance throughout the state. Was prominent in politics and out spoken in his convictions, particularly in his opposition to war with Great Britain; when, however, the war commenced, to his credit it can be said that he lent his aid to its most vigorous prosecution. His powers as an orator kept his services in demand as a public speaker. Several times he was a candidate for important public office but was defeated with his (Whig) party. By appointment he never held any office other than surrogate of Otsego county, which came to him without solicitation and which he held for many years. In 1849, he removed to Rock Island, Ill., where several of his sons had preceded him; died in Rock Island, May 18, 1852. Married July 3, 1809, Eliza Maria Bennett Ely, born May 27, 1791, in Philadelphia, Pa., died October 10, 1853, in Rochester, Ind., at the home of her son, Charles, was daughter of John Ely; he was a soldier in the War of the Revolution, served in Colonel Samuel H. Parsons' 6th Connecticut regiment, born about 1757, died in 1847, was son of James Ely; he married Dorcas Andrews, died in 1766, was son of William, who was son of Richard Ely.

FAMILY NO. 18.

From Family No. 9. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Joseph, Adino N., Adino N.

Adino Nye Brackett was born July 11, 1822, in Lancaster, N. H.; in 1837, entered Phillips' Exeter academy; graduated from Dartmouth college in 1844; went to Hanover county, Va., in 1845, and engaged in teaching; returned to Lancaster in 1849, and commenced the study of medicine; took a course of lectures at the Vermont Medical college and in 1851, received the degree of M. D. from Dartmouth; was in Florida a short time, returned to Virginia in 1863, and engaged in practice. During the civil war he was frequently with the Confederate army, though he never became a member of it, doctoring the sick and wounded. With the residents of that state he suffered worse than the horrors of war under the nefarious carpet-bag rule which was inflicted upon them for some years following the close of the war; he lived to see his state redeem itself from that thralldom. Of him his daughter, Mrs. Wingfield, wrote—

"My father was of small stature, well proportioned and very erect. He possessed an unusually bright, hopeful spirit, with an unflinching kindness of heart. He was a great lover of good literature, and greatly devoted to his profession; but, a few years before his death when declining health compelled him to give up active practice, he would say 'I am never lonely with my books and memories.' He died at the age of seventy-nine years having 'all that could accompany old age, honor, love, obedience, troops of friends.' My father did not join the Confederate army for the fact that having a very large practice and being exempt by law as a physician, his friends persuaded him not to join."

Died May 13, 1901, at his home "Clay Bank" in Hanover county, Va. Married March 6, 1855, Lucy A. Bumpass, born June 26, 1827, died March 28, 1892, daughter of Thomas Bumpass, a wealthy planter, owning "Grass Dale"—a large estate, and many slaves. Her mother was Fannie E. Thompson, daughter of Colonel Nathaniel B. Thompson. Mrs. Brackett was educated at what was considered at the time a very fine boarding school, at Scotch town in Hanover county. Issue:

Lyman Stebbens Brackett was born October 3, 1818, in Cherry Valley, N. Y.; graduated at Albany (N. Y.) Medical college in 1839, and immediately went to Rochester, Ind., and began the practice of medicine. He was greatly attached to his profession, and devoted all his energies to his improvement. His letters of the period tell how much his time was occupied with his science; had none to spare for hunting and fishing with his brothers, though wood and stream abounded in game. Also he mentioned his intention to marry that he might the better become contented with his lot and work with greater energy. But brief was the time allotted him to achieve his ambition, for on April 7, 1847, he died.

FAMILY NO. 25.

From Family No. 10. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, James, Joseph, James, Albert G.

Albert Gallatin Brackett, soldier, was born February 14, 1829, in Cherry Valley, Otsego county, N. Y.; attended school at the town academy. In 1846, at the commencement of the War with Mexico, he endeavored to secure a commission in Colonel Stevenson's New York regiment, but was disappointed in his expectations. The regiment was ordered for service in California, and was forwarded via Cape Horn. His oldest brother, John E. Brackett, a graduate of West Point, was a captain in the regiment; on this account, for one reason, he was anxious to join it. Had his ambition been gratified in this instance, it is highly probable that his profession and course of life would have been entirely different from what they were.

In the summer of 1846, he went to Rochester, Ind., where resided his brother Dr. Lyman Brackett. While there he renewed his efforts for a commission, and met with success. In May, 1847, he received a second lieutenant's commission in the 4th Indiana volunteer infantry, and during the same month was promoted to first lieutenant. This regiment was immediately sent to the front and became a part of Lane's brigade. The mention that he belonged to an organization forming a part of this famous brigade sufficiently designates the honorable part he took in the war. He was mustered out July 16, 1848.

While in Indiana, prior to his entering the army, he studied medicine in the office of his brother Dr. Lyman Brackett, until the latter's death, in April, 1847. Upon his return from the war he pursued his studies with his brother Dr. Charles E. Brackett of Rochester. During 1849, he took a course of lectures at the Medical college in Geneva, N. Y., and at the Medical college in Castleton, Vt., from which latter institution he received his diploma, in November, 1849.

His father had removed in 1849, to Rock Island, Ill., where had preceded him his sons William, Joseph W., and James W. The two latter were practicing physicians. To Rock Island came their younger brother Albert G., who, in 1850, hung out his shingle. Shortly he determined to seek his fortune in the southern states. He journeyed down the Mississippi to the gulf. No place he found which offered inducements to make him a resident. Nothing he saw surpassed the opportunities presented by the new and growing cities of the upper Mississippi. So in 1851, he is found located in Keokuk, Ia. After a stay of a few months he returned to Rock Island and purchased an interest in the "Advertiser;" with this paper he was connected until October, 1852. In the spring of the following year, he was elected city clerk. In June, 1853, he removed to Rochester, Ind., and practiced medicine, forming a partnership with his brother Charles. In August, 1854, he left Rochester for Logansport, Ind., where he became associated in the practice of medicine as partner with Dr. G. N. Fitch, afterwards United States senator.

If our Dr. Brackett had an ambition in 1854, to enter the army, there is nothing in his journal to disclose that he did. In it is recorded a visit to Washington in January, 1855, but nothing as to the purpose. In that year Congress authorized an increase of the regular army by four regiments. He had the indorsement of the entire Indiana delegation for appointment as captain in a cavalry regiment; of the delegation were William H. English and Thomas H. Hendricks. A few short entries in his journal quickly tell the story. "I was appointed captain of cavalry March 3, 1855, by his excellency Franklin Pierce * * *. The official news reached me on the 29th of March in a letter from Hon. Jefferson Davis, Secretary of War * * *. Sunday, April 8, 1855, received orders from Colonel Samuel Cooper, adjutant general of the army, to report by letter to Col. Albert S. Johnston at Louisville, Kentucky. Monday, April 23, 1855, opened a recruiting office in Market street, * * * Logansport, Indiana. Saturday, May 5, 1855, reached Jefferson Barracks, Mo., with twenty-one U. S. recruits."

The regiment, when raised, was sent to Texas, where it was in active service suppressing Indian outbreaks until 1860. Upon the commencement of the civil war, his company, under his command, was sent to New York via Key West, was refitted and forwarded to Washington. He took part in the action at Blackburn's ford and in the Battle of Bull Run; organized the 9th Illinois volunteer cavalry, familiarly known as "Brackett's regiment," and was commissioned its colonel. It was raised in the fall of 1861, and mustered into the service for a term of three years; it participated in the campaigns in Arkansas in the army of General Curtis; later the regiment was stationed at Memphis, and participated in the battle of Guntown.

While colonel of the 9th Illinois volunteer cavalry (mustered out October 26, 1864), he was placed in command of the 2nd brigade of the cavalry division of the army of Tennessee, and in January and February, 1864, was engaged in defending the Memphis and Charleston railroad; in July, 1864, was appointed special inspector of cavalry, army of the Cumberland; was at siege of Atlanta; was with the army under General Thomas and participated in the battle of Nashville. From the close of the civil war until he retired, February 18, 1891, Colonel Brackett was in active service with the army on the frontiers, a participant in quite all the movements of the army for the suppression of Indian outbreaks of the period, in Nevada, Montana, Wyoming, Dakota and Arizona. In this connection it is proper to mention that he was the first officer to cross the Mexican border with troops in pursuit of Indians.

During the civil war he was severely wounded in the action at Steward's plantation in Arkansas, and received the brevets of major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel, for gallant and meritorious service. Was promoted, July 17, 1862, major of the 1st cavalry, U. S. A.; in March, 1869, lieutenant-colonel of the 2nd cavalry, and in 1879 was promoted colonel of the 3d cavalry.

About 1884, there was an expected vacancy to occur in the ranks of brigadier-general. All things considered, length of service, personal qualifications and seniority, Colonel Brackett was entitled to the promotion; but it was not his lot to receive it. He had reasons to be proud of the unsolicited efforts on the part of his civilian friends to secure him his due; copies of their testimonials in his praise are neatly arranged in his scrap-book, each printed slip having its marginal note as to wherefrom it was clipped, and date of issue; nearly without exception they are from papers whose editors or publishers were acquainted with Colonel Brackett and had knowledge of his capacity as a soldier, his fitness for the ranks, and his sterling qualities as a man. Whatever his ambition was in the matter, or how great his disappointment was as to the outcome, no act or word on his part attests them.

A very busy life he led. Duties as a soldier ever were first; then his avocations, of which he had a few. These he pursued as opportunities best suited. In his younger days, he had commenced keeping a journal, and at intervals he recorded events of moment in his life, about the time of their respective occurrence. However, when nearly every day saw him a participant in matters of historic note to the country, the journal was discontinued, and in lieu of its records we have the benefit of his recollections set forth most vividly in numerous articles for the press.

He was gifted with a talent for sketching; the subjects of his pencil were numerous; they were the buildings and barracks at posts where he was stationed; the varied natural scenery presented by our western country, and pretty much else he met with. All these are very tastily depicted — the colors the best at hand and usually quite suitable. The art he practiced while at school and his journal contains many specimens of his skill.

His word sketchings, the products of his pen, however, are of wide scope and possess merit peculiarly their own. Colonel Brackett was an acute and accurate observer of a vast field of operations on which he was no inconspicuous actor; in addition he was blessed with a tenacious memory. His forte was to depict what he saw and was otherwise cognizant of, in a plain, unaffected style, rarely with comment, and always having a regard for the exact truth. His clear understanding of events and his lucid recollections of what had transpired during his career, make of estimable value his accounts of battles and expeditions in which he had been. The topic, perhaps, on which he most delighted to write, next to those incidents in which he had acted a part, were the lives of men with whom he had been associated. Probably there has been no better sketch made of the character of his old colonel, Albert Sidney Johnston, than came from the pen of Colonel Brackett. His articles were much sought after by publishers of magazines and newspapers. His reputation as an author he had made long prior to that as a soldier. About 1854, he published his "Lane's Brigade in Central Mexico." The merit of the work as a concise and interesting narrative of the part of the war he had witnessed, soon attracted attention and brought its author many compliments. Soon after the close of the civil war he published "The History of the United States Cavalry." This work covered, in part, a field which Colonel Brackett seldom essayed to cover in his other writings, viz., matters in which he, himself, did not take a part, or was not associated with those who did. However, sources of accurate information were open to him, and of these he availed himself so thoroughly that he produced a work which has been and is considered a standard authority as to all matters to which it relates. With such reputation as a historian as he gained by writing these books, articles produced by him were in considerable demand. From about 1880 to 1893, he wrote extensively, never once drafting upon his imagination for a statement and seldom borrowing from the knowledge of others, but confining himself to what he had the best of knowledge, viz., his personal cognizance of it in some way. Seemingly nothing about him escaped his observation and study. The plants, birds, animals, the people, all were his subjects; to them all he found time to devote, and wrote long articles about them to scientific journals. In 1891, he wrote an article on the Mexicans (not Greasers). His knowledge of this people he had gleaned from his several sojourns in Texas along the Mexican border; in this article is found as fair and accurate summary of the manners and characteristics of that simple people as has yet been written; on reading it one is impressed at once with what Spanish civilization has done for the Indian in Mexico compared with what other civilizations have done for him elsewhere, so well does the author keep to the front the thought that these people are Indians—peaceable, quiet, contented Indians, to be alone compared with Indians of other countries of North America.

Upon retiring from active service in 1891, Colonel Brackett resided in Washington, D. C., until his death, June 25, 1896; he died from paralysis; had been ill for three years, and although quite helpless for a year, was not seriously ill until the last month of his life. His remains were interred at Arlington, Va. Married February 24, 1853, Martha Tolman Briggs, born May 7, 1829, in Malden, Mass., daughter of Rev. In September of that year he entered Brown university, Providence, R. I.; graduated with the third honor of his class in 1857; then entered the Newton Theological seminary at Newton Center, Mass., where he remained until June, 1859. Accepted the pastorate of the Lafayette Place Baptist church in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; severed his connection with it in November, 1865, and began work in First church in Brooklyn, N. Y., Eastern district; while with this charge, the Rochester university conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity at its commencement exercises in the year 1870; he severed connection with it in February, 1873, with shattered health. FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter VII. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua. Nathaniel.

Nathaniel Brackett, the youngest of the sons of Joshua, was born in Greenland about 1721; he inherited the homestead, and the fine old mansion house erected by his father. He was named for his father's maternal uncle Nathaniel, the son of Michael Mitton, killed by the Indians in August, 1676, in Falmouth. Served in the French and Indian wars of his day; in 1745, was a private in the company at Greenland commanded by his brother, Captain John Brackett; his name appears in a list of those of the company who were impressed by its captain to unload stores from a ship. Subsequently he was promoted to lieutenant and afterwards is mentioned as Captain Nathaniel. There is nothing further now known as to his military service; he probably was with Captain John Brackett at fort William and Mary. Married Elizabeth March, of Kittery, and died about 1778; will proved September 3, of that year. Issue:

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua. Nathaniel, Thomas.

Thomas Brackett was born about 1756, in Greenland. The War of the Revolution had not been long commenced before he showed the rebellious spirit within him. Not content with belonging to a patriot military company, he was anxious to learn to be a better soldier than indifferent officers could teach him to be, as the following petition shows. He with his cousin, Joshua Brackett, son of James, was among its signers; it is dated June 26, 1775.

"Whereas we the Subscribers, inhabitants of gree Nland, being duly sensible of the Importance of Being instructed in the military art in this Alarming crisis, & willing to be taught the same that We may be prepared to defend the liberties of our Country. which we hold dearer than our lives, and Whereas our officers, who were appointed And commissioned by the governor, have been negligent in larning us the same, we have, therefore, Thought fit to chose thomas berry, captain, Greenleaf Clark, first lieut., david simpson, second Lieut., thomas johnson, ensign; we tharfore pray that the Hon^{ble} congress woud confirm our said choyse and Yure petitioners are in duty bound, shall ever pray."

So much did he improve in the manual of arms that he was appointed lieutenant in Captain Mark Wiggin's company, Colonel Pierce Long's regiment in which capacity he was mustered August 30, 1776, not then twenty-one years of age, and served to January 7, 1777. He did duty, too, elsewhere than in Greenland; was stationed at fort Ticonderoga in the fall of 1776 and through some mishap lost his clothing, for which loss he was recompensed by the province. Thus we see that all of the grandsons of Joshua Brackett, of military age, were soldiers in the patriot army.

Married October 22, 1778, Martha Folsom, born January 11, 1760, died May 27, 1835, daughter of Colonel John; he was of Stratham, born July 7, 1723, died April 17, 1787, married (2nd) March 17, 1757, Mrs. Martha Brackett, was son Jeremiah; he was of New Market, was born about 1680-5, died in 1757, married Elizabeth —, was son of Deacon John; he was born in 1640, died in 1715, married Abigail Perkins, was son of John; he was baptized in 1615, in Hingham, Eng., died December 27, 1681, in Exeter, N. H., married October 4, 1636, Mary, oldest daughter of Edward and Mary Clark Gilman. Martha Brackett nee Wiggin, born in 1729, was daughter of Thomas Wiggin, and widow of Thomas Brackett, uncle of Thomas Brackett. Abigail Perkins was daughter of Abraham Perkins of Hampton, N. H.

It is traditional that Martha had beautiful arms and hands, and the sight of these resting on a window ledge one day as the young lieutenant passed, it was, that attracted him and made him one of her suitors. Their married life was brief. His farm, the one his forefathers had owned, is on the banks of the Great bay. In certain seasons this body of water is dangerous for small sailboats because of high winds that suddenly sweep over it. While in such boat and but a short distance from the shore and his house, the boat was capsized by a sudden gust of wind, and he was drowned.

Stratham town records read—"Lt. Thomas Brackett, Eliph Wiggin, jr., and Samuel Kinnison were drowned near George Brackett's point by the up-setting of a small float April 14, 1785, and were all taken up the next morning and were buried the 16th day of April, 1785. Lt. Brackett and Eliph Wiggin were buried in 1 grave and Samuel Kinnison in the same burying place, namely the orchard of Lt. Brackett decd."

His widow did not long remain a widow. Working on the farm was a hand, Shadrack Robinson. On him the fair Martha looked with favor. From what follows it appears that looks alone wholly failed her purpose. On a Sunday evening Shadrack came down stairs dressed in that day's best, and the confident widow asked—"Are you going out?" He answered "Yes, going courting." "But there is courting to be done right at home," said Martha. And Shadrack went out courting no more. They were married September 2, 1787, had a family of four and a descendant of one of them married a French, a descendant of Thomas. Mrs. Martha French was authority for the account of the widow's courtship. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Anthony, Thomas, Joshua, Nathaniel, Thomas, Nathaniel.

Nathaniel Brackett was born July 12, 1779, in Greenland; was drafted to serve during the War of 1812 and went to Portland to join the army, when the war ended; was a carpenter; moved from Greenland to Belfast, Me., about the time of his marriage; resided in Belfast to about 1816; removed to Stratham, N. H., where he resided until about 1826, then went to live in New Market where he dwelt until his death, June 8, 1857. Married September 4, 1801, Elizabeth Brackett, born June 23, 1781, died November 23, 1856, (see fam. 2, div. 14.) Issue:

1. Elizabeth, b. 23 July, 1804, in Belfast, Me.; mar. (1st) Joseph Brackett (see issue fam. 12, div. 14), mar. (2nd) Samuel Fellows; d. 4 Dec., 1897, in Lowell, Mass.

H., d. 6 Apr., 1858, son of Reuben and wife, Lydia Churchill, of New Market. Reuben was born in Stratham, and wife in New Market; Mrs. French lived over 80 years in New Market, attained the great age of 93 years, and had the unimpaired use of her vigorous mentality to the end. She was very proud of her lineage and took great delight in the family history. During the last years of her life her friends and relatives would assemble at her home on the anniversary of her birthday much to her pleasure and enjoyment. The notes she had made relative to persons of our name, of whom she had read or had heard, were the means of informing the writer as to the whereabouts of namesakes, he would have been unlikely to have learned from other sources. For these favors it was alone in the power of the writer to make a return by sending to her to read such documents of interest as from time to time came into his possession, fearing that she would not live to see their contents in this history. She supplied nearly all the data contained in this work relative to the descendants of her great-grandfather. She was benevolent, sympathetic and charitable—humane characteristics that need no adorning. Her death was the result of a shock she had received a few weeks prior. During her long, quiet lifetime, experiencing only those changes which are the lot of mortals living their fewer years, she saw more of those changes than they—saw her friends grow old and die with their children and grandchildren about them; saw their children grow old and pass away leaving two generations of descendants to mourn them; saw their grandchildren become men and women, who, with their children and their children's children, followed her to the grave. She died 9 Mar., 1905—lacked a few days of completing her 94th year. She had been a widow for over 45 years. Death came to her as sleep to a child. Issue:

His father, John Brackett, removed to Billerica from Braintree in 1660 with his brothers Peter and Josiah, and his sisters Rachel, Mary and Hannah. The town records of Billerica of the year 1660 read that the town "accepts" John Brackett et al as inhabitants.

"Braintree gave to Billerica an important circle of eight families. The mother of Simon Crosby had married some years before, the Rev. Joseph Tompson of Braintree, his second wife. In his parish Captain Richard Brackett lived an active and exemplary deacon of his church. Naturally enough the minister's son Joseph, and his step-son Simon Crosby, found wives in the deacon's family, and one Samuel Kinsley was equally fortunate. These sisters had twin brothers John and Peter, and the five brothers and sisters all came to Billerica and found as many homes here. John Brackett had another attraction here, as his wife was a daughter of William French." (Hazen's Hist. of Billerica.)

Josiah Brackett did not remain long in the town; he removed to the adjoining town of Chelmsford, perhaps shortly before or during King Philip's war, and then had been a resident of Billerica but a few years. The town records show that he was assessed for war tax after he removed to Chelmsford.

Captain Richard Brackett owned land, but never resided, in the town. He participated in the divisions of land in the town made in 1660, 1665, and 1685, in the latter a share was allotted jointly to him and his son John.

John Brackett's farm lay between two brooks; near their confluence and a highway, stood his house on the farm. The following is of interest in this connection.

"John Brackett requesting of the Town a small skirt of Land Lying between his house and the highway on the East together with a small Angl of Land Lyinge across the upper road way at Abot's Bridge and Simon Bund's fence, according to two trees already marked by Jonathan Danforth and so runninge to the hither corner bounde mark of John Durants house Lott, the Towne grant his request, provided that John Brackett at his owne charge shall make a good and sufficient Bridge over that durty place (called Abot's bridge) both watter coarse and all the bad way on each side so far as needful which sufficient way shall be judged and accepted of by the present surveyors and the work to be done by the said John Brackett by the last of the nexte month ensuing or else this grant to be void."

The near neighbors of John Brackett at the time of King Philip's war, were Daniel Shed, Jr., Samuel Trull and James Kidder, Jr. In the several neighborhoods of the town, a house was designated as a garrison house which was a dwelling house that was central and suitable for the purpose. John Brackett and the above-named neighbors were to rendezvous at the house of Sergeant Kidder where were stationed two soldiers. Peter Brackett and his neighbors were to rendezvous at the house of Simon Crosby. The houses selected for garrison houses were strengthened and fitted as such; Peter Brackett had employed under him thirty men at this task and at work on other fortifications.

It will be remembered that Captain Richard Brackett by his will gave a one-fourth part of all of his lands, meadows "and housing" in Billerica, to the children of his son John—"my meaning is the children he had by his wife, Hannah Brackett." Why he made the distinction he did in the children by the two wives of his son, is not clear. By the terms of the will Ebenezer was excluded from sharing in Captain Richard Brackett's estate. His mother, Ruth Brackett, at the time of her marriage to his father, was the widow of Joseph Ellis—at the time of his death a resident of Billerica,—and was the mother of his children. Her father was John Morse, of Dedham. He and his father, Samuel Morse, were among the first settlers of that town. She was the oldest child. After dwelling in Dedham for several years he removed to Boston and engaged in tailoring; after a year or two at this business, about 1655, he returned to England and carried with him a considerable sum, the greater portion of his estate, for investment. Of his intention of so doing he mentioned in his will, which was probated in 1657. By its terms his children were to share and share alike; his daughter Ruth to be paid within one year from his decease, the others when they reached the age of twenty-one years. Probably that she had such estate in her own name at the time of the death of her second husband, as to make sufficient provisions in life for her children, it was, which prompted Captain Richard to exclude them from sharing in his estate, he preferring to assist the children by the first wife, who were not so well off in this world's goods. All the children of John Brackett would, of course, share in his estate. Whatever may have been the prospects of Ebenezer and her other children by her second husband, the widow thought that she and they would be better off among her relatives in Dedham, and to that town she took them. She died in their youth, and they found homes with their uncles and other relatives. Her grandfather, Samuel, was born in 1587, in Dedham, Eng. (wife was Elizabeth, born in 1587, died in 1654), and died in Dedham in New England, in 1654; he was probably son of Richard Morse and wife, Margaret Symson, of Dedham, Eng.

Ebenezer Brackett continued a resident of Dedham, Mass., until his death December 7, 1750; was a farmer; perhaps conveyed his farm to his son Ebenezer. Married January 21, 1712, Abigail Heale, who died January 23, 1772; he and his wife united with the church in Dedham, in February, 1728. Issue:

I Maud Ellsworth, b. 19 Aug., 1884.

II. Avis Raymond, b. 28 Sept., 1886.

5. Anson S., b. 4 May, 1838; d. in July, 1863. As accounts pertaining to his life and death are conflicting and interesting, they will be given at length. His mother's sister, Lucy, mar. Isaac B. Kirtland, a cotton merchant in Mississippi and a banker in Memphis, Tenn. About the year 1858, she and her husband visited her relatives in New England and New York, and Anson S. Brackett returned with them to Memphis. Upon the commencement of the war he went into the Confederate army. As shown by the report of the War Department his service was—Enlisted 21 May, 1861, at Nashville, Tenn., as a corporal in co. H, 7th Tenn. vol. inf., C. S. A., and was discharged Sept. 5, 1861, on surgeon's certificate of disability. Enlisted 3 Jan., 1862, at Camp Cheatam as a private in co. G, 4th Tenn. vol. cav., C. S. A., and was killed 2 June, 1863, near Cumberland, Md.

The last letter his brother or sister received from him brought the news that his intention was to go into the Confederate army; they had heard that he had married a wealthy lady, but had no further information concerning him or his of a reliable character. The writer with a view of learning if he had left surviving any children, endeavored to correspond with some of his comrades in arms. A letter to the commander of a post at Nashville, brought a promise of aid; the correspondent advertised in "The Veteran" and soon the writer had the facts which served his purposes.

It appears that an Anson S. (H. S.) Brackett who had an uncle in Memphis, was killed by another Confederate soldier near Columbia, Tenn., in July, 1863. A letter was received dated July 1, 1906, from Mr. R. K. Estes, R. F. D. No. 10, Columbia, Tenn., which reads—

"Mr. H. S. Brackett came to my house in the fall of 1862, sick with consumption and staid six months. He was a soldier, belonged to Forrest's cavalry, Starn's brigade. He claimed to be from Memphis, that he had an uncle there. He was a man 35 years old, small stature, light complexion, sandy hair; claimed to be unmarried. He was killed in July, 1863, in a personal difficulty concerning his character, by another soldier by the name of Saddath (or Sudith). Brackett was well educated and a perfect gentleman. I brought home his corpse and buried it in the family graveyard."

The entries upon which the report of the War Department is based, were perhaps made months after the death of Brackett and upon the vaguest rumors relative to matters connected with it. Starns' brigade was not in Maryland during the war. Brackett had not been with his regiment for six months at the time he was killed. Perhaps it was that being a northern man he had so resented a charge of indifference or treachery to the cause he was fighting for, that a resort to arms was made then and there by him and his opponent, with fatal results as to himself.

From Family No. 12. Descent: Richard, John, Ebenezer, Samuel, Solomon, Josiah P.

Josiah Parkhurst Brackett was born June 16, 1797, in Natick, Mass. When a young man he lost his left hand by the discharge of a gun; his nerve and self control were shown by his refusing to be blindfolded or bound, as the custom was then in amputating; he underwent the operation without moving a muscle or uttering a sound though greatly weakened by the loss of blood. Was never physically strong, of quiet retiring disposition, of firmness in conviction, and strict blameless life. Never joined a church but believed unquestionably the Bible as he read it, and was essentially a Congregationalist. Led a very quiet home life; not being well enough to do active business, raised vegetables, did miscellaneous work in the bakery, and was a surveyor of wood and lumber. Seldom went from his home, even to the villages near by, and never rode in the cars. The early death of his wife was probably the reason for his leading a secluded life. Resided in Framingham; died in 1866. Married in 1837, Susan Edmonds, who died in August, 1839, daughter of Jonathan and wife, Lucy Nourse, of Framingham, Mass. Lucy Nourse was direct descendant, sixth generation, from Rebecca Nourse executed as a witch in Salem, Mass. Issue:

Amos Brackett was born about 1804, in Framingham, Mass.; about 1830 he lost a valuable horse, and believing that those who doctored it, did not understand their business, he said that he would become his own veterinarian, that no one but himself should ever prescribe for a horse of his. He procured the latest works on the science and qualified himself for the practice. At first he refused to doctor any horses except his own, but departed from this course through the persuasion of those who needed his services and knew his skill; he soon had a very extensive practice, had large barns filled with patients, valuable horses. About 1850 he removed from Nobscot to Worcester where he carried on his practice, and where he resided until his death—estate administered in July, 1866. Married Almira Morse. Issue:

FAMILY NO. 40.

From Family No. 18. Descent: Richard, John, Ebenezer, Samuel, Samuel, Charles N., Gilbert R.

Rev. Gilbert Robbins Brackett, D. D. was born July 9, 1833, in Newton, Mass.; died November 29, 1902, in Charleston, S. C.; was a Presbyterian clergyman and at the time of his death had been pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Charleston, for thirty-one years.

Scarlet fever, with which he was afflicted at the age of ten years, left him a legacy of miserable health; with him for years, living was a struggle against death. His search for health was, perhaps, the means of his finding that field of labor for which he was peculiarly fitted by his gifts for zealous work, for constancy in purpose and of cheerfulness of disposition, that won hearts to his cause and many friends and admirers of himself.

At an early age he made choice of the ministry as a profession. Delicate health alone barred his path; though there were other obstacles along the way, these he surmounted; they never caused him to forego his purpose. In his early school days at Waltham, Mass., he broke down under the strain. Yielding to the advice of friends he gave up his intention of studying for the ministry and commenced the study of civil engineering. One month of the course at Rensselaer institute at Troy, N. Y., demonstrated his physical unfitness to take it; his frail health could not withstand the requirements for the preparation for the profession. A week's employment in a Boston counting house quelled all desire he may have had for a commercial life, even with a prospect of $10,000 a year; in preference he would choose "a literary profession with poverty," he wrote in his diary.

Notwithstanding the misery which the confinement and labor of a student's life meant to him he resolved on a "college education or die." For three years he attended academies and in the fall of 1853 entered the freshman class of Amherst (Mass.) college with the result that before the year was ended his physician advised him to quit college and study forever.

For a year he worked in the store of his brother Henry in Boston. In April, 1855, he went west, to Chicago, seeking employment. "The journey was full of mishaps, accidents, disappointments, and experiences with rascals, all ending with his sickness and a forced return home."

He had a fondness—a talent for music; his fingers were so short and hands so small that he could not span an octave;—"fingers were all thumbs and stiff-jointed besides," his sister Georgiana said. Defects of nature this determined and persistent man could overcome or remedy; his fingers he lengthened by straining and pulling, by a course of digital gymnastics, until he could span an octave, and thereupon faithfully practiced day after day for hours at a time until he became a proficient performer.

This man, whose soul's aspiration was to become a minister, had written in his diary, perhaps as a rule of observance, the following from Goethe:

"If thou art anything
Keep still in silence;
All will work out well.
For place him wheresoe'er you will
The real man will always tell."

This man who thought the better course was to "keep still in silence" as "the real man will always tell," could, in his younger days, hardly utter in public a coherent sentence. "His native diffidence," reads the Charleston Presbytery tribute to the memory of the Rev. G. R. Brackett, "made speaking in public excruciating torture which often paralyzed him into forgetting carefully written prayers and addresses, and even the Lord's prayer. His agony was unspeakable; but he persevered until he was able to speak and pray fluently with little embarrassment."

In 1856, he made a five-months' voyage to South America; he returned greatly improved in health and resumed his practice on the piano.

In the fall of 1858, his intention was to go to Texas to teach school; the friend who offered him a school in Texas removed to New Jersey and offered him a school there. To New Jersey he started. At a wharf in Boston was a ship bound for Savannah, Ga. Yielding to an impulse this man of persistence in purpose engaged passage for Savannah. The next morning he was too late to get aboard; with a row boat he overtook the ship while getting out to sea, and on January 23, 1859, he stepped foot on the land where was cast his lot thenceforth, the Sunny South.

He was still in search of a school; he found none in Savannah. One was offered him in Stark, Florida; en route to accept, he was induced to take a school in Fernandina, Florida. While there he became a member of the Presbyterian church, having been theretofore united with the Congregational church. The pastor of the church in Fernandina offered to teach him theology privately. To this he at once agreed. Shortly after he entered Columbia seminary; "had come there to die," a fellow student said. He took regular exercise for his health, practiced with dumbbells, took morning baths and walked two or three miles daily. And to the woods he went every day to practice elocutionary exercises to strengthen his voice and, perhaps, to do a little stump speaking. Never was there a man so modest but that he can speak amidst the stumps; it is there one can begin to shake off his diffidence. In 1862, he was licensed to preach and supplied churches that year; was at Unity church, Rowan county, N. C., for some months from June, 1863; was ordained May 14, 1864, and became pastor of Third Creek church in Rowan county, N. C. It is proper to state that soon after his graduation from the seminary in 1862, he served a little time in religious work among the Confederate state troops from N. C. June 5, 1868, he became pastor of Scion church, Winnsboro, S. C., and in May, 1871, became pastor of the Second Presbyterian church in Charleston. In 1877, Davidson college, N. C., conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

By devotion to his duties he endeared himself to the people; through his constant efforts, particularly his able and carefully prepared sermons, the church grew in numbers and popularity until the measure of his success fully gratified his ambition. He earned the love and respect that were shown him in life and paid to his memory after his death. It was his lot to be in the South upon the commencement of the fratricidal strife. Little can one imagine the intensity of his feelings, of his extreme sorrow, at the catastrophe to the nation. His work was the ministry, to help care for the suffering, and this he performed. It is not to be wondered at that he was loved by those whose dangers, sufferings, and misfortunes he had shared. DIVISION NO. 20.

JOSEPH BRACKETT OF BRAINTREE AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FOURTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter XI. Descent: Richard, James, Joseph.

Joseph Brackett, a grandson of Captain Richard, was born in Boston, on November 5, 1675; on the records of the Third church of Boston is chronicled that he was born on that date. Mr. Richardson gave August 9, 1675, as the date of his birth. He was probably a Boston boy until he reached the age of eight years when, in 1683, his father returned to Braintree to live. At the time Captain Richard was the only male person living in the town, or who had lived in it since the departure of his son James in 1673, bearing the name of Brackett. His sons John and Peter settled in Billerica, 1660, and his son Josiah followed them about 1673. James, who was to inherit the parental estate in Braintree, returned there to dwell; from the time thereof until his death in 1718, a period of thirty-five years, he was a continuous resident of Braintree. Though the youngest of Captain Richard's sons he was given nearly all of his father's estate in Braintree, where was situated the far greater portion of it. This estate he equitably divided between his sons Joseph and Nathan.

Joseph Brackett lived continuously in Braintree from 1682 until his death at an advanced age. He was a good farmer, carefully preserved and added to what he received from his father and was able to leave his sons a good competence. Unlike his father and his grandfather, he did not hold town, military or church office; hardly a mention of his name is contained in the town records. It is inferred that he was of a retiring disposition, was well disposed to attend to his private affairs and delegate to others his interest in town matters, who had a taste for such.

Between the time of his marriage and the time when he had reached military age, there had been five years of warfare with the Indians. Scarcely had he been married when war with the French and Indians commenced, which lasted a dozen years. Without doubt he was a well trained soldier, but, perhaps, saw little active service, unless he volunteered to go on an expedition against Canada, as Braintree was a safe distance from the frontier and not liable to attack. In truth the town records disclose little concerning him further than that in 1709, he voted against division of the town and that in 1731, he paid £15 for a pew in the new church.

Married Mehitable Belcher on December 25, 1701, as the town records show. Mr. Richardson gives the date of marriage as January 25, 1701. She was born in Braintree on September 12, 1676, was daughter of Moses and wife, Mary Nash; he was perhaps son of John Belcher and wife, Sarah. Issue, all born in Braintree:

DIVISION NO. 21.

NATHAN BRACKETT OF BRAINTREE AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FOURTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 1.

From Chapter XI. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan.

Nathan Brackett was born September 23, 1678; was baptized September 29, 1678, in First church of Braintree. He lived continuously in the place of his nativity from 1683, until his death in May, 1743. The quiet life of a farmer fulfilled his aspiration; the records do not disclose that he held any office—even minor town or parish office. In 1723, he was chosen constable, but prevailed upon his brother-in-law, John Veazy, to accept the office, whom the selectmen appointed in his stead. In 1708, he signed a petition against the division of the town and the following year voted against its division. Neither he nor his wife united with the church until well along in years. She became a member April 29, 1722, and he on February 3, 1723. Married March 27, 1707, Hannah Veazy; the ceremony was performed by Captain John Wilson. She was baptized January 21, 1685, died before March 31, 1753, was granddaughter of William and wife, Elinor, of Braintree. In his will dated March 31, 1743, he mentioned all of his children. Its first provision is that the "ferry lot" was to be sold to pay debts. The rest of the real estates was devised to his wife for life; "also the time of my Indian boy." Upon her death son Nathan was to have two-thirds of the lot "I bought of Puffer," and daughter Sarah one-third. To son James, the eldest, was given so much additional to what he had received from his father, as to make a double portion. All the remainder, the will provided, should be equally divided among the children, James excepted.

The farm owned by Nathan and his ancestors remained the property of descendants of his in the direct male line until the first part of the eighteenth century; it was in the locality of Mount Wollaston in Braintree and is referred to as being at Mount Wollaston. This is the mount on whose top Thomas Morton erected the maypole about which his "merry merry merry boys" circled to the delight of the native spectators, and where Miles Standish and his melancholy men made their objective point when they went to seize those merry merry boys, destroy the pole, and secure the beaver pelts.

The song for the exercises on that May day had a line or two seemingly designed for the benefit of the saints at Plymouth; thus they read—

"Give to the melancholy man
A cup or two of 't now and then.
This physic will soon revive his blood
And make him of a merrier mood."

As setting forth the order of the exercises for the occasion, the first verse of Morton's May day song runs—

"Make green garlons, bring bottles out;
And fill sweet Nectar freely about;
Uncover they head and fear no harm
For here is good liquor to keep it warm."

No doubt the program was carried out. The maypole they danced about was eighty feet high and on its top was placed a pair of buck horns; standing on the highest part of the hill it was a fair mark at sea and was visible from the locality of the Plymouth colony across the bay. The settlers there were Morton's enemies whom he speaks of as "precise Separatists;" he relates how "its setting up was a lamentable spectacle * * *". They termed it an Idol; yea they called it the Calf of Horeb; and stood at defiance with the place naming it Mount Dagon; threatening to make it a woful mount and not a merry mount."

This worldly Tom Morton who, in 1622, dwelt near the mount which, or a part of which, became the property of the staid Puritan, grim Richard Brackett, was the Mr. Thomas Morton who in after years was an instrument in saving to George Cleeve the vast estate that became the property of the Bracketts of Falmouth. No doubt Captain Richard and George Cleeve, while together in attendance on the general court, reviewed their recollections of worldly Tom Morton, who knew how to do a good turn as well as to make trouble. In Nathan's day the story was well shredded by time, had so little of the frame work left that most any yarn would do for a filling; hence, Morton was little better than a pirate as the story was then told.

FIFTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 2.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, James.

James Brackett was born November 3, 1709, in Braintree, where he died in 1781; in 1752-3-4, purchased from his brothers Josiah, John and Samuel, their respective shares in their father's real estate in Braintree; was proprietor of the well known Brackett tavern, corner of Elm and Hancock streets; served as selectman in 1761. Married August 2, 1733, Abigail Belcher, ceremony performed by Rev. Samuel Chickley, of Old South church; she died in 175-, was daughter of Deacon Gregory Belcher; he was born February 28, 1664, married March 25, 1690, Elizabeth Ruggles, was killed by accident while plowing July 4, 1727, son of Samuel; Elizabeth Ruggles was daughter of John and wife, Rebecca Farnsworth, who were married March 18, 1662. Married (2nd) Mary, widow of Richard Brackett; she died September 20, 1780.

When this Mr. Brackett reached middle life, vexatious disputes had commenced between the colonies and Great Britain which led to the War of the Revolution. The following will show on which side, and at how early a day, he took a stand. Under date of May 4, 1766, Mr. John Adams, who became president of the United States, wrote in his diary—

"Returning this morning, I saw for the first time a likely young button-wood tree, lately planted in the triangle made by the three roads by the house of Mr. James Brackett. The tree is well set, well guarded, and on it is an inscription—

'The tree of liberty, and cursed is he who cuts it down.' Query. What are the consequences of this thought? I never heard a hint of it until I saw it, but I hear that some persons grumble and threaten to girdle it."

The manifestation of impulse or feeling in a degree as the planting of this tree would indicate, at so early a period in the contest, would hardly comport with the dignity and substantial business methods of the proprietor of the far-famed hostelry of Braintree. But there was a member of his household from whose subsequent conduct is inferred that he could have told the future president all about the inscription on the young button-wood. James Brackett was not the man to disturb a tree of liberty; and once planted near his house it remained, the deed having his approval. The good man did not live to hear the glad tidings of peace, but did live to hear that liberty had been won. Issue, not in order of birth:

FAMILY NO. 3.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, John.

John Brackett was born April 14, 1719, in Braintree, Mass.; baptized on April 19, same year; a brick layer by trade; with his brother Samuel worked on the construction of King's chapel in Boston, dedicated August 21, 1754, in which Samuel was a pew owner. The two removed to Boston when young men and resided there, he until subsequently to 1758. In the contest between the colonies and Great Britain he supported the latter; removed to Vermont, was in Bennington prior to 1775; when about the age of sixty years he enlisted and served in the British army, perhaps about the time of Burgoyne's invasion; removed to Manchester, Vt., where he died in the year 1800, at about the age of eighty years. It is not certain that the John Brackett who died in Manchester in 1800, and served in the British army was the John Brackett who was born in Braintree in 1719, and was connected with Episcopal churches in Boston, but there is strong probability that he was; his associates in Boston well fitted him for his part in the war and his age at death would make his birth occur in the year 1719; on these coincidences alone his parentage is based as here given. Married April 26, 1742, in Trinity church, Boston, by Rev. Addington Davenport, to Damaris Dean, baptized November 2, 1718, daughter of George and wife, Hannah Ruch. John Brackett was a member of Trinity church. He may have married the second time. Issue:

2. John, bapt. 3 June, 1744; d. 15 July, 1758.

FAMILY NO. 4.

From Family No. 1. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, Nathan.

Nathan Brackett was born July 1, 1724, in Braintree, Mass.; was baptized July 5, same year; a farmer; resided in Braintree to about 1754, when he removed to Upton, Worcester county, Mass.; had purchased land, sixty acres, there December 10, 1753, and in September, 1759, purchased of Joseph Chapin fifty-two acres on east side of West river; also is of record purchase by him of forty acres from Nathan Tyler made June 4, 1761; as part consideration he and successors were to pay to the treasurer of the trustees for Hopkington one pence per acre as rent, on March 25, of every year until March 25, 1828, and forever thereafter three pence per acre. There are recorded sales of land by him of forty acres to Nathan Tyler, Jr., August 28, 1760; thirty-five acres to Eben Wood April 1, 1765; thirty acres to Francis Boon October 24, 1775, rent to be paid to trustees of Hopkington. Name is found in list of Upton training soldiers, dated March 23, 1757; from this is inferred that he served in the last French and Indian war. Late in life, subsequently to the War of the Revolution, with his family removed to Buckland, Franklin county, Mass., where he died in 1795. Married September 5, 1749, Hannah Owen; she was probably daughter of Nathaniel, and was born November 3, 1720; Nathaniel was born November 1, 1691, in Braintree, died prior to 1730, married Deborah, was son of Nathaniel and wife, Mary, son probably of William and wife, Elizabeth; An Elizabeth Owen was drowned June 3, 1702, while crossing a stream. Issue:

SIXTH GENERATION.

FAMILY NO. 5.

From Family No. 2. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, James, James.

James Brackett was born — —, 173—; baptized January 25, 1736, in Braintree. For several years kept the Althorp house corner of Elm and Hancock streets. In 1770, purchased house near Canal street and in close proximity to Mount Wollaston, one of the oldest in Braintree; it stood on the site of a former garrison house; cuts of it decorated the bills issued by a Quincy bank. Was an extensive owner of real estate and engaged largely in shipping and trade. In 1774, with a Captain Brown owned several vessels engaged in fishing on the Grand banks; fish were salted in Braintree and exported to West Indies and South Europe, where during Lent a ready market was found at an advanced price. On his farms at Mount Wollaston were erected salt works to supply salt for curing fish; however, his vessels on return voyages could bring sea-salt from Situbal, Portugal, at less cost than salt could be manufactured at Quincy, and the works were discontinued.

He was an ardent supporter of the colonies in their war for independence: not only during the war but for years prior thereto on all questions and matters leading up to the revolution he was outspoken against Great Britain's tyrannous course. It was as early as 1766, that John Adams recorded in his diary about the tree of liberty being planted in the triangle near the hotel. At a later date he wrote,—

"By the way, to-day I heard that Major Miller and James Brackett, Jr., were heard since the March meeting raving against Deacon Palmer and said he was a knave, etc."

In 1774, a report was spread in Boston and elsewhere that numbers of the people in Braintree had combined to harass the Episcopalians and oblige them to leave the town. At the town meeting held in October, 1774, it was voted that said report was malicious and injurious, was subversive of good government.

There were a few in Braintree who were Tories; they were principally Episcopalians. Among others who were suspected of Toryism was a William Brackett, who at the outbreak of the war was taken into custody and required to declare his intentions. The writer has been unable to place this William Brackett; he was probably a son of the Tory, John Brackett, an uncle of this James Brackett who was making life uncomfortable for Tories of all kinds. The only William Brackett of whom is known, living in Braintree during the period, was as good a soldier in the Continental army as any who served. However, said uncle John was a very good Tory and Episcopalian; his home was in Boston, later when the contest became warm, in Vermont. To exclude all doubt as to his and his father's politics that might arise from the well known course of John Brackett in taking sides with the king, James Brackett, Jr., kept none of his patriotism under a bushel; the planting of the tree of liberty and the raving against Deacon Palmer and other Tories and Episcopalians, served to distinguish himself and his family in matters of politics from relatives of that ilk. By the town voting as malicious the report that its people had combined to harass the Episcopalians, no disapproval was intended as to his course or conduct; for at the same meeting the town voted that the committee of inspection carry out the orders of the committee of correspondence respecting the withholding of material from the soldiers, and James Brackett, Jr., was honored with a place on the committee.

Served on local committee of safety in 1779, 81, 82 and 83; drafted in 1775, to serve in the war but was excused; later volunteered, was private in Captain Edmund Billings' company, Colonel Jonathan Bass' regiment; company assembled June 13, 1776, to drive British ships from Boston harbor; chosen selectman in 1786; at his request another was appointed to fill the office. In 1794, he built a residence on the site where stood his father's tavern. Made voyages in his vessels to the West Indies, usually accompanied by his negro boy, Luke. In his old age was quite deaf and for that reason sat in the pulpit during services to enable him to hear the sermons. Married March 24, 1761, Mary Spear, daughter of John, 2nd, and wife, Mary Arnold; his father, Joseph, was born February 23, 1687, married Ann —; his father, Ebenezer, was born August 3, 1654, died December 7, —, married July 16, 1679, Rachel Deering, was son of George and wife, Mary; all of Braintree. FAMILY NO. 10.

From Family No. 4. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, Nathan, James.

James Brackett was born January 27, 1765, in Upton. It is traditional that he served in the American army during the last year of the War of the Revolution; that one night when very hungry, while on picket duty he milked a cow, used one of his shoes for a dish and from it drank the milk. A story is related of him that when a young man he worked for a Shaker and at witnessing the Shaker's dancing and hearing his singing while at his religious devotions, he, himself, became lively and joined in the dancing; whereupon the old gentlemen rebuked him saying, "Jamie when thou art converted then thou mayest dance." His daughter, Harriet, related an instance in his family government. A few days before his fatal illness he commanded this daughter to say "Please sir," for something she wanted. She positively refused to say it, whereupon he said, "Then I will drown you in the brook," and taking her in his arms across the road made a pretense of carrying out his threat. Harriet thought it would be pleasant to live with the fishes, until he began putting her head in the water. The ducking produced the desired effect; she said "Please sir," and was carried back in a more obedient frame of mind. On the close of the War of the Revolution, removed to Buckland, thence to Ashfield, Mass., and later to Delhi, N. Y., where he died in 1812. Married in Ashland, January 1, 1798, Anna Watson Flower, born January 27, 17—, died February 14, 1866, in Hannibal, N. Y., daughter of Major William who died at about the age of ninety-five years, and wife, Hannah Flower, his first cousin; her father, Major Lamrock Flower, moved from West Hartford to Ashfield, and died January 6, 1815. 7. Harriet, b. 22 Jan., 1808, in Delhi, N. Y.; upon the death of her father she went, in the fifth year of her age, to the home of her grandfather, William Flower; at the age of seven she went to live with a family, but because of the ill treatment, her mother took her at the end of a couple of years, to care for her the best she could; at the age of nine she was adopted by her mother's sister, Sally Flower Bement, of Ashfield, Mass., with whom she resided until she attained her twenty-first year. In 1829-30, learned the milliner's trade; 1831, taught school in Pittstown, N. Y., in Grafton in 1832, and in Hoosick in 1834. In Pittstown she lived with her brother John Brackett, for two years until his second marriage, whose first wife she nursed in a lingering illness during her stay. With her mother in 1836, she went to the home of her brother William, in Hannibal. After teaching two terms of school she was mar. 9 May, 1838, to William Perkins, blacksmith and farmer, b. 2 Nov., 1811, d. 28 Mar., 1885, son of Job and wife, Phœbe Harrington, of Hannibal. Resided in Hannibal to 27 Mar., 1847, when they removed to Fairdale. Shortly before her death 9 July, 1875, removed to Hannibal Center. Had a strong and noble character, a quick and active brain, a retentive memory, and fine conversational powers. FAMILY NO. 12.

From Family No. 5. Descent: Richard, James, Nathan, James, James, James.

James Brackett was born July 29, 1769, in Braintree. He served in 1786-7 in Captain Elisha Wales' company which operated with the state troops in the suppression of Shay's rebellion. On one of the night marches twenty-three men of the company were frost-bitten; for forty-five nights he slept with his knapsack for a pillow.

During the War of 1812, while a passenger on the "Enterprise," a coaster, which sailed from Penobscot for Boston with a cargo for him of firewood in the hold and fish and lumber on the deck, on July 6, 1812, in Boston bay it was taken by the privateer "Germantown" of Marblehead, Mass., and carried to that port. In a letter which appeared in the press dated July 14, 1812, Mr. Brackett related how the "'Germantown' valiently fired at and brought us to;" how the coaster was boarded by a prize-master, who was followed by the captain of the "Germantown," who examined "our papers and ordered us to proceed. We had proceeded about half a mile when we were again fired at * * * boarded us a second time and made a bon prize of us." At Marblehead the privateers became satisfied of their mistake and settled with Mr. Brackett, taking his cargo to Quincy and paying him one dollar for each hour the vessel was detained. His purpose in writing was to let the public know "who the owners of the privateer are which is aiding the enemy in making war upon American property."

In 1809, Mr. Brackett built a hotel in Quincy near the Neponset river; in the hotel a grand "peace ball" was held in the spring of 1815. About 1820, he was engaged in lumbering in Maine; in 1830, purchased a farm in Greenport, L. I., where he made his home for several years; removed to Philadelphia, where shortly after he died April 18, 1855. Married in Exeter, N. Lemuel Brackett was born September 8, 1780, in Braintree. In 1800, sailed for Cadiz, Spain, in schooner, "Nancy" one thousand tons, owned by Ebenezer Parsons, of Boston, with captain, mate, cook and four hands; while at Cadiz a small vessel arrived with the news of Washington's death; was twenty-four days in crossing the ocean and forty days on return voyage. January 19, 1810, was known in the annals of New England as the cold Friday. Mr. Brackett related that for several days the weather was very mild; the day before with his hired hands he had been repairing fences and at night the tools were left in the field, the men remarking how mild the weather was; the next morning the temperature had dropped many degrees below zero and so high a wind was blowing that it was dangerous to expose one's face out of doors from fear of freezing; that "the whole harbor was smoking like a steam engine;" the weather soon became as mild as before the cold spell. In 1826, he built for his home a house on Hancock street adjoining the property where Governor John Hancock was born. Rendered material aid to Mr. Jeffrey Richardson in compiling his work on the descendants of Captain Richard Brackett. Late in life he removed to Troy, N. Y., thence to Lansingburg, N. Y., where he died February 14, 1869. James Alanson Brackett was born March 5, 1800, in Buckland, N. Y. Upon the death of his father, at which time he was twelve years old, he was bound out until he should become of age; during this period his life was a very unhappy one. His native ability gained for him a fair education; his fondness for books materially improved his schooling—was self-taught. After his marriage he spent one and one-half years in Cincinnatus, N. Y., with his brother William, in a store; then removed to Hannibal Center, N. Y., where he lived the remainder of his life. Purchased a grist mill and cloth works of a pioneer in Hannibal Center by the name of Burroughs, and soon after purchased a farm from the same party; some years later he sold the mill and thenceforth gave his attention to farming at which he was eminently successful. Was one of the foremost and best known men in his community; a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church, a class leader, superintendent of Sunday school and even janitor of the old schoolhouse, in which for many years services were held. Through his efforts and liberality a church edifice was erected in 1865. Died November 25, 1868; married about 1825, Sarah Sherman, of Rhinebeck, N. Martin Stoddard Brackett was born in Elbridge, Onondaga county, N. Y., on December 19, 1810; acquired his education in the public schools, the local academy and under the tuition of the local Presbyterian minister. In 1828 he, with his brother, had the charge of a large number of men and teams going overland to Washington, D. C., to work on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal; at the end of two years he returned to Elbridge and resumed his studies with his pastor. Commenced, in 1831, civil engineering in New Jersey, was engaged in the construction of a canal built through that state. Subsequently he entered a law office in Camillus, N. Y., where he studied law for over two years. In 1836, again engaged in railroad and canal construction in New York. Removed to Bellevue, Mich., in the spring of 1838, and in the fall of that year entered the law office of Gibbs and Bradley, of Marshall; admitted to practice in 1839. During the same year was elected to the office of county clerk and was twice re-elected to that office; at the next election was chosen to serve as district attorney; nominated in 1842, for the state senate by the Whig party but was defeated; identified himself in 1848, with the Democratic party; was nominated for the state senate in 1856, and for lieutenant governor in 1864, by that party. Also a Mason in high standing and as such was well known throughout the state; between three and four hundred Masons followed his remains to the grave. He had left college and after a few years in business had re-entered to complete a course. At his grave a marble memorial stone was erected by his classmates. He had laudable ambitions in life and made great efforts to attain them; his lovable disposition and gentlemanly instincts made him a favorite with acquaintances. The writer has been informed through correspondence and conversation as to the estimates of Ransom D. Brackett by his associates. Their praise of him produced a conception of a sweet-tempered, whole-souled, benevolent person, whose presence had a charm in itself to attract one to him, whose light-hearted, gentle ways and speeches called forth one's happiest thoughts and recollections to sustain his part while in contact with him. In short, to know him was to love him.

In 1890, he commenced work on a family genealogy, which he carried on for a few years and then suspended with the intention of resuming at his leisure. His untimely death brought sorrow to many a heart.

Edgar Truman Brackett, born July 30, 1853, at Emerson's Corners, in the town of Wilton, Saratoga county, N. Y., is an attorney in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. In his childhood his parents removed to Mount Vernon, Linn county, Ia., where he grew to manhood. In 1872 he graduated from the classical course of Cornell college at Mount Vernon, a denominational institution of learning, under the management of the Methodist Episcopal church. In September of the same year, he came to Saratoga Springs and began the study of law in the office of Pond & French; was admitted to the bar at the Elmira general term in June, 1875, and in the same month received from his Alma Mater, the degree of master of arts, which also, in 1898, conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws. In the spring of 1876, he became a member of the firm of Pond, French & Brackett, which continued for twelve years; became the head of the firm, Brackett, Butler & Bancus; is now practicing his profession alone and his clientage is among the largest of the lawyers of Saratoga county; is frequently sought by attorneys to assist in the trying of their cases before juries or in the argument of appeals before appellate tribunals; was elected state senator in 1895; appointed chairman of the committee of Affairs of Villages, and a member of the Judiciary, Railroad and Public Education committees; re-elected in 1898; in 1899, appointed chairman of Judiciary committee, and a member of several other committees; served as senator until January 1, 1907.

His independent course as a legislator has, from time to time, attracted public attention outside of the state of New York. Perhaps it is a misnomer in calling his course "independent;" it is much better described as "regular" in the use of that word as signifying the performance of the duties of the office in disregard of the commands of individuals, the undue promotion of whose private interests require the control of the law-making power. One is loathe to call the course of a legislator as "regular" who regards those commands. In brief, Senator Brackett determines for himself his course and neither threats nor promises have deterred or swerved him therefrom. His many admirers have suggested and are promoting his candidacy for the office of governor. To no one man is more due the credit for the recent legislation in New York in regard to the control of insurance companies, than to the fearless senator from the Twenty-eighth district.

Senator Brackett has taken a great interest in educational institutions; for several years he has served as a member of the committee on Public Education; recently he gave to Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Ia., the sum of thirty thousand dollars.

CHAPTER VIII.

SAMUEL BRACKETT, THE FIRST IN BERWICK.

The wife of Samuel was Elizabeth Botts, daughter of Isaac Botts. Mr. W. D. Spencer, of Berwick, Me., wrote that he half-guessed that the maiden name of the wife of Isaac Botts was Elizabeth Freathy; that "Moses Spencer [she married (2nd) Spencer], one of her sons, had a son Freathy, who was the oldest. Now Moses' wife was a daughter of Joseph Abbott; the name, Freathy, does not occur in her lineage."

Anthony Brackett, described as of Walpole, Mass., served in Colonel Joseph Read's and Colonel Thomas Craft's regiments from May, 1775, to September, 1777.

Anthony Brackett, described as of Boston, served as a soldier in the Continental army in 1778; was a resident of Boston; at time of enlistment he was twenty-eight years old. This man had fair complexion, dark hair, blue eyes, and stood five feet seven inches in height. Served in Colonel Jabez Hatch's Boston regiment. In the same organization served a Nathaniel Brackett. Also, Nathaniel and Anthony Brackett of Roxbury, served as privates in Captain Hopestill Hall's company, Colonel Lemuel Robinson's regiment; each served twenty-one days.

An Anthony Brackett of Stoughtonham, Mass., served in Captain Ebenezer Tisdale's company, which marched on the alarm of April 19, 1775; service of twenty-two days.

Anthony Brackett was enrolled April 20, 1776, to serve in Captain Jonathan Danforth's company, Colonel Asa Whitcomb's regiment; reported, "deserted April 25, 1776," on muster roll dated at Camp Ticonderoga, November 27, 1776.

Anthony Brackett married June 20, 1770, Annah Rhoads; both of Dedham.

Anthony Brackett married September 27, 1752, Margaret Baeth, both of Charlestown. He may have been the son of Anthony of Boston, whom the latter described in his will as "went beyond seas," by his first marriage. (See chapter X.)

The names Anthony and Joshua are not borne by any descendants in the male line of Richard of Braintree; hence, it is concluded that these Anthonys and the Nathaniel, who was probably a brother of the Anthony of Roxbury, were descendants of Anthony of Portsmouth, although they served in regiments raised in Massachusetts. Endeavor has been made to enumerate all the male descendants of Anthony of Portsmouth; it is believed that there has been presented the names of all belonging to the early generations whose lineage from him is through his sons Anthony, Thomas and John. The lineage of these Anthonys has not been traced through said sons. It is probable that the immigrant Anthony had at least one more son; I shall rather presume that he had than account for the descent of said four Anthonys and Nathaniel Brackett through any of his known sons, and shall designate said other son as the Francis Brackett to whom relates the following:—

"Jacob, son of Francis and Frances Brackett, born August 14, 1696" (see Record of Births and Baptism in Boston). In 1739, a Francis Brackett of Exeter, N. H., signed a petition for annexation of New Hampshire to Massachusetts.

Thomas Brackett was born October 10, 1795, in Maine; died July 12, 1865; lived at Rockaway Beach and in Brooklyn; was a mariner; married about 1821, Elizabeth Nostand, born May 11, 1806, died in May, 1881, daughter of Cornelius, who lived on Long Island; had a sister, Abigail, who married (1st) Rider; (2nd) Baker. Issue, not in order of birth:

1. Elizabeth, b. 1 Feb., 1823; d. 1 Sept., 1849; mar. P. Wells; no issue.
2. Pro Lucius Delamater, b. 12 July, 1837; resides in Bayonne, N. J.; mar. Lydia Brown. Children: Emma, b. about 1861; May, b. about 1871; Charles, who is dec., was mar., had dau., Lulu.
3. George D., b. 20 Jan., 1842; d. 27 Nov., 1883, without issue.
4. James H., b. 15 Aug., 1847; d. 9 May, 1862.
5. Thomas Wilbur, b. 19 July, 1849; mar. Anne L. Brown. Children are Charles K., b. 14 Mar., 1877, and Mary L., b. 28 Aug., 1885. Resides in Bayonne, N. J.

Another branch of the family whose lineage has not been traced from an immigrant, and whom it is believed, are descendants of Anthony of Portsmouth, reside, the greater portion, in Knox county, Me. This branch consists of descendants of Mr. Joshua Brackett, mentioned in "Annals of Warren," Maine. He was born in 1777; married April 12, 1805, Sarah Weston, and died February 10, 1847. It is stated that he came from Wakefield to Warren. There are Westons in Wakefield, Mass., hence, it is inferred that, as his wife was a Weston, it was from Wakefield, Mass., that he removed to Warren; he resided in Sterling. His first child, a daughter, born June 5, 1806, married Charles Mink. Ira W., baptized November 8, 1807, married Mary Jane Norcross; resided in Argyle, Me. Waldo D., baptized December 10, 1810; never married. Gilman, married Mary Dickey; had Franklin W., who resides in West Warren; Charles G., who resides in Thomaston, Me.; Austin, who resides in Warren, Me.

Mr. Chandler Brackett of Union, Me., wrote that his father, William Brackett, married Eliza Standish, and that his grandfather, Joshua Brackett, married Eliza MacIntic; he also wrote that his father died when he was a child; that when he was eleven years old, he and his mother left Warren, and, hence, he knew little about the Bracketts. He was born July 16, 1827, in Warren; married November 20, 1851, Arvilla Bryant; served in company E, 20th Maine volunteer infantry for three years. Children are John E., who married Nettie J. Whitcomb; died September 5, 1874. Charles R., who married Etta J. Dickson; died March 19, 1892. Isaac H., who married Abby A. Lancy. George F., who married Grace E. Hoyt. William, who married Rowena Fish.

Jared Brackett was born in 1808; died February 19, 1901, in Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; first a shoemaker, then a Methodist minister; was married five times; resided in Wales, Westfield and Ware, Mass.; had two or three children, of whom one was Orville G. He was born in 1832; died in 1889; was twice married, and had three children, viz.: Mrs. George H. Phillips, Beacon St., Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Louis Silvey, Camden, N. J., and William Henry. The latter was born August 14, 1853; is overseer in a thread mill in South Wellington, Conn.; married Annie Brownlee; has son, George William. He was born August 24, 1880; married Lena G. Korper; resides in Hartford, Conn. The name, Jared, occurs in the Brackett family.

Bracketts settled at an early day in Rutherford county, North Carolina; their descendants removed from there to Franklin county, Georgia, and Jackson county, Tennessee. Since the civil war, families of this branch have found homes in Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma. The progenitor of this branch was Benjamin Brackett; his wife was Jane Curry. Among their children were Thomas, born about 1780; Morgan, born about 1790; William, called Buck; and Atkins. William had son, Felix. Another of the third generation was Aulston (married Mary Marshall), born about 1795; died in July, 1867. His son William, deceased, served in company G, 34th Georgia volunteer infantry, C. S. A., from 1862 to the close of the war; married Jane McMurray. Children are James A.; William T.; and Charles E. Another son of Aulston Brackett, was John, born June 18, 1827; died September 21, 1885; served in the cavalry, Confederate army; married — Sewell. Among his children are John A.; A. W., and Jefferson Davis Brackett. The last named was born June 1, 1861; resides at Rural Vale, Tenn.; married Mollie E. Worthy, who died May 29, 1895; he again married subsequent to 1900; has daughter, Lillie P., born August 6, 1890. There are many other descendants of Benjamin Brackett.

There is a branch of the family in Halifax, N. S. Andrew Brackett was its progenitor. He was born in England, in 1785; died in 1867; married Mary McDaniel, daughter of Michael; came to America in 1830, on the "Lord Cornwallis," and settled at Bear Cove, N. S. His son, Thomas, married Hannah Holt, of England, and had sixteen children, nearly all of whom reside in Nova Scotia; one of the daughters went to reside in the state of Washington. Another son, Redman, born in 1828; died in 1860; married Amelia Darrach, daughter of Archibald. Issue: Archibald; Andrew; James; and John. Archibald, born in 1850; married Elizabeth Munro; children are Mabel G.; Mary C.; Agatha; and Hugh John, born in 1893. James married Thressa Munro; his children are Redman; Hugh U.; James. Andrew married Mary A. Reyno; has sons, Wallace; Vincent; Benedict.

William Brackett was born, lived, and died in England; married July 11, 1814, Ann Moss. Two of his sons were Percival (born in 1817, died in 1893), and Edmund; the latter lived in Australia. Their oldest son, Frederick William, born in 1815, died in 1872, leaving no issue. His widow, Elizabeth, lived in Brixton, England, and died July 9, 1906. Her estate of over sixty thousand dollars, she bequeathed to the children of her husband's brothers, eight in number. If, at the end of two years, none of them are found, the estate will be divided among certain hospitals in London. Heirs were advertised for in September, 1906, in "London Times."

William Brackett, a successful estate agent of Tunbridge-Wells, head of the firm of Brackett & Sons (London office, 34 Craven St., Charing Cross), commenced his present business in Tunbridge-Wells, in 1865, and now has the largest of the kind in the south of England. His father, Joshua Brackett, commenced business as a bookseller and printer, in 1823, in Sudbury, Suffolk, and in 1835, removed to Colchester, where he continued in business until his death, in 1876. The father of Joshua was the Rev. Mr. William Brackett; in his early days he was a printer in Sudbury, and from 1795 to his death, in 1802, was a Baptist minister at Waleham Abbey, in Essex; he was son of William Brackett, born about 1730 (See p. 7). Arthur W. and Frederick H. Brackett are sons of William Brackett of Tunbridge-Wells.
